

WHAT might the world of our time have been, if the science which has transformed it had had two thousand years, instead of scarce two hundred to grow? And how often the world has just stumbled on the threshold of that science, and failed to open the door, not because it did not know enough, but because it did not care, or was afraid.

A news item about the old monk Roger Bacon is a reminder. A laboratory report, containing copper salts made by a formula written in cipher six hundred years ago by Bacon, has just been exhibited as a confirmation of the correctness of the key by which the cipher was translated. Is it not more interesting as revealing the beginning of what would have become modern science if Bacon had dared teach, and others had dared learn and use, what he had discovered?

THE story begins with Aristotle, long before Christ. Aristotle laid the systematic foundations of both physical science and intellectual philosophy. But his successors thought only the philosophical part worthy their attention. The result was that philosophy flourished for ages, while science died still-born. If the Greeks, with their astonishing intellectual activity on the things they thought worth while, had included Aristotle's pure science in their interests, as they did his pure philosophy, the later Romans, with their practical and organizing genius, would have made the applications, and the work which waited for America to do in the Nineteenth and Twentieth centuries could have been done by Rome in the First and Second. We should now have been harvesting nearly two thousand years of its product.

THEN came the old monk, Roger Bacon, who, six hundred years ago, knew chemistry, the microscope and the telescope. But he thought he would be betraying the confidence of God if he revealed them. Doubtless he would also have been burned at the stake for traffic with the devil. And nobody would have thought of using these discoveries to increase the comfort of human life, even if he had known, and dared. The knowledge existed, but not the will and courage to use it.

FINALLY, Roger Bacon's successor and namesake, Francis Bacon, taught the world, not so much to know, as to care. Francis Bacon knew little more of the physical world than Aristotle, or Roger Bacon, and much of what he knew was mistaken. He added something, but not much, to our knowledge of things. His great service was in reversing our attitude of mind. He made the study of things, as well as of books and of thoughts, respectable. He was, of course, not alone in this, since the time was ripe, but he gave it its classic expression, at a time when nothing was intellectually respectable unless philosophy made it so. When Francis Bacon found it not beneath his dignity to investigate the effect of cold flesh in stuffing a bird, he killed fowl with snow, the age of experiment had arrived. So we eat fresh meat all the year, as our predecessors of Caesar's time might as well have done, if they had turned their interest in that direction.

NOW comes our time, and we also do, not what we know, but what we think it worth while to know. We think physical knowledge, and the machinery derived from it, supremely worthy while. So, whatever of the conquest of nature remains unfinished goes rapidly and enthusiastically on. Intellectually, we are as able to solve the problems of human society. Any three intelligent and informed men of whom there are millions, could find out how to make war impossible forever. But not all the good will of earth combined is yet able to get that knowledge effectively used. It is not beyond human wit to find the cure of poverty. But if anybody announced it, he would be silenced as a "Bolshevik," as Roger Bacon would have been burned as a heretic. The knowledge now exists which could breed human stupidity and viciousness out of existence in three generations. Instead, we pursue a course whose present drift is to breed out intelligence and character. There are even those who claim to have the clue to the mystery of life after death. We denounce them as freaks, and will not inquire. We are as inhibited, by our attitude of mind, from using certain parts of the knowledge available to us as were those whose lack of interest in physical knowledge postponed the Age of Machinery two thousand, or six hundred years. Our successors will puzzle why we did it.

ORMISTON TO FIGHT EXTRADITION

G. O. P. Makes Peace with Independents

REPUBLICANS TAKE FRAZIER BACK IN FOLD

North Dakota Senator Is Placed in Party Column For Committee Positions

FULL STATUS RESTORED

Norris, 'Trust Buster,' of Nebraska, Made Chairman of Judiciary Body

(By United Press)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11.—The Republican party in the senate today made peace with the western independents, who were ousted two years ago, and restored Senator Lynn B. Frazier, North Dakota, to the party organization, as if he had never been banned.

Frazier's name was replaced in the Republican column of committee assignments by unanimous vote of the Republican committee of committees in executive session. The Republican conference will meet Monday to ratify the action of the committee.

Chairmanship for Frazier
This will enable Frazier next session to succeed to the chairmanship of the Indian affairs committee, although he will not obtain any chairmanship this session. Frazier had desired to be named to the agriculture committee, but the committee on committees informed him there was no vacancy. He will be considered when the first vacancy occurs.

Senator George W. Norris, Republican, Nebraska, known as the "trust buster," and at times a critic of the leaders of the party, was named chairman of the important judiciary committee.

Senator Charles L. McNary, Republican, Oregon, co-author of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, was named chairman of the agriculture committee, replacing Norris.

The full list of committee assignments was not completed. The committee will meet again later in the day to finish it.

House Tries for Peace
House leaders tried unsuccessfully to restore peace several days ago, and were forced to postpone action for a week, in hope that after the senate acted house insurgents would fall in line.

Winding up the first week of its session, congress today found itself embroiled on a tangle of election and political issues, with legislation still in the background.

Four primary election investigations are to be reopened next week; a bribery charge against a new senator is to be investigated Monday; resolutions are pending to bar presentation of credentials of two senators-elect; election contests, involving one or two other states, are being threatened, and a charge involving a 1924 primary campaign is to be laid before another committee.

Four Dancers Perish In Cabaret Fire

ROME, Dec. 11.—Four dancers were burned to death when fire attacked the Apollo cabaret, haunt of tourists, during the night. Flames suddenly broke out on the stage and spread rapidly to wood-work and hangings. Women were trampled upon as the pleasure-seekers dashed to the exits. The dancers, caught in their dressing rooms, were unable to escape.

DISMISSAL OF CASE AGAINST GREEN SOUGHT

Federal Judge Will Rule Monday on Motion of Defense Counsel

(By United Press)
SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11.—Whether the government has a case against Col. Ned M. Green, deposed prohibition administrator for northern California and Nevada, charged with diverting seized liquors to his personal use, will be decided Monday.

Federal Judge A. F. St. Sure will rule then on a defense motion to dismiss the charges upon which the former dry chief is being tried.

Two of the 11 counts originally filed against Green already have been dismissed, by government motion, to strengthen its case on the other charges, prosecution counsel said.

The trial, which started Monday, thus far has seen a parade of government witnesses taking the stand to tell how Green was a royal host. He had a "little black bag," in which he took quality intoxicants from the prohibition office vaults to his suite in a downtown hotel, they said.

There, it has been brought out, he gave dinners, and a varied assortment of intoxicants was served. Chief witnesses against Green have been Col. Sam L. Johnson, his former assistant, now acting prohibition administrator, and Johnson's son, Ivan.

The defense has attempted to prove that the Johnson interest in the case was increased by the belief that Green was "going to get" his former aide, and that Ivan Johnson told friends exultantly, "We've got him first, instead."

Judge St. Sure's bar has some of the aspects of a bar of a different nature, as occupying a central location as exhibits at each trial session are some two-score bottles, some filled, others empty, which Green is alleged to have used in playing host.

Slayer of Wife Draws Life Term

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 11.—Mike Rosl, Denver roadhouse proprietor and former underworld leader, must spend the remainder of his life in prison for the murder of his wife, Caroline, whom he shot to death in an attorney's office here several weeks ago. A sealed verdict, imposing this penalty, was returned by a jury in District Judge Henry Bray's court today. The state had demanded the death penalty.

Six Must Stand Trial for Libel

FRESNO, Dec. 11.—Six men, who are alleged to have signed a statement that Sheriff W. F. Jones was intoxicated at a Coalinga street dance, last August, must stand trial for criminal libel. Superior Judge Charles R. Barnard has ruled. Judge Barnard, in a decision late yesterday, refused to dismiss the indictment against the Rev. L. D. Davis, W. Harrison, M. B. Smith, J. W. Newcomb, Ralph Kelsay and Thornton Doelle, which charges criminal libel.

CHANCES FOR FEDERAL TAX REBATE FADE

Majority Leader in House Says Surplus Should Be Used to Cut Public Debt

OPPOSITION IS VOICED

Tilson Sees Long Battle In Case Attempt Is Made At Temporary Reduction

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The house ways and means committee today voted to table all tax reduction resolutions for the remainder of the session. Republicans sponsored the move, while Democrats opposed it.

(By United Press)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11.—Chances of a tax rebate at this session of congress faded today, when Representative Tilson, Republican, Connecticut, majority leader, declared the existing surplus should be applied to a reduction of the public debt, instead of to tax reduction.

With congressmen at odds over disposition of the surplus, Tilson said, any attempt to make a temporary reduction for the first six months of 1927 "would bring a prolonged contest for the general revision."

"I feel inclined toward making a temporary tax reduction for the first six months of the year 1927, but I find some opposition to this proposal among Republican members of the house and an apparent determination on the part of Democratic members that there shall be no tax reduction unless the entire question is opened and a permanent revision of the tax law made," Tilson said.

He added he believed it unwise to attempt a general revision at the short session. He said the present law had not been in effect long enough to demonstrate what its permanent revenue yield would be.

"This, and the further fact that a considerable portion of the present so-called surplus came from an extraordinary effort in the collection of back taxes, make it all the more unwise to attempt a permanent reduction now," he said. "I have, therefore, come to the conclusion that the best thing to be done at this session is to apply any surplus above the actual needs of the government to a reduction of the public debt, which, as the president so well said in his message, in itself constitutes a permanent tax reduction."

FLIGHT FROM S. F. TO HAWAII PLANNED

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11.—A San Francisco-to-Honolulu flight in a land plane will be attempted soon, according to an announcement by the local chapter of the National Aeronautic association.

C. K. Vance, veteran flyer of the air mail service and war-time aviator, will pilot a specially built Douglas transport plane, with a cruising radius of 3700 miles.

A land plane instead of a seaplane has been selected because the former, being lighter, can carry more gasoline. A small boat on top of the fuselage will be capable of sustaining two persons at sea in case of accident. Empty gasoline tanks would keep the plane afloat for some time.

The flight will be attempted purely as a sporting proposition and is being financed by San Francisco and Honolulu interests.

Dawes May Give Prize Cash Away

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Vice President Charles G. Dawes, who shares with Foreign Ministers Briand and Stresemann, of France and Germany, respectively, the 1925 and 1926 Nobel peace awards, was understood here today to be prepared to donate his portion to an international organization whose ideals correspond to those of the Nobel award group. Dawes himself would not comment. A proposal was made in Geneva yesterday that Dawes, Briand and Stresemann turn the money over to a fund for child welfare or other international work, under the auspices of the League of Nations.

POLY BATTLES REDSHIRTS IN 'GRUDGE' GAME

Traditional Football Foes Clash for Tenth Time On Local Field

Santa Ana was leading Fullerton, 7 to 6, at the end of the first quarter of their football game at Poly field here this afternoon.

One of the Southland's rarest mid-winter sunsets smiled down on the colorful setting this afternoon as Santa Ana and Fullerton high schools, traditional rivals, lined up on Poly field here for their tenth "grudge" meeting on the gridiron.

The football championship of Orange county was to be the consolation of the victor. Fullerton, triumphant after a hectic race in the Orange County Athletic league, needed only to thrust aside Coach "Tex" Oliver's Santa Anans to have a clear claim to the honors for this entire district.

Fullerton evidently believed this assignment was not such a difficult one because hundreds of ardent football followers from the city to the north began pouring into Santa Ana early in the afternoon, talking victory and casually mentioning something about 14 points.

Long before game-time it was apparent that Poly field was to be a "sell-out." Fans from every section of the county began arriving at the local enclosure as early as 1 o'clock and while "Shorty" Smith's Redshirts were slight favorites with the non-partisans most of them were confident it was to be a battle royal with victory going to the team that got the breaks.

The Fullerton squad, 30 strong was headed by the redoubtable "Shorty" Smith, himself a Santa Ana high school graduate and a former Poly coach, arrived at the Poly gymnasium shortly after 1 o'clock. Smith, in characteristic pre-game fashion, was pessimistic and said his team would have to get all the breaks to win.

Coach Oliver, of Santa Ana, said he was only asking that his team play as well as it did against San Diego in its last game of the year.

The probable starting lineup:

BOTH SIDES IN FALL-DOHENY TRIAL REST

Argument by Counsel and Judge's Charge Remain Before Jury Gets Case

NOTED TENOR ON STAND

John McCormack Testifies At Final Session on Oil Man's Good Character

(By United Press)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11.—After brief rebuttal testimony in the Doheny-Fall oil conspiracy trial today, both sides announced they were through presenting evidence and only summation by counsel and the judge's charge to the jury remained before the case goes into the hands of 12 youthful jurors for decision.

The defense closed its direct testimony at 9:43 a. m., after John McCormack, tenor, had testified to Doheny's good character. Then the prosecution presented brief rebuttal testimony, consisting mostly of records of the senate oil hearing and the Los Angeles civil trial to test legality of the Elk Hills naval reserve leases.

No Rebuttal by Defense

The defense presented no rebuttal testimony.

Albert B. Fall, former secretary of interior, and E. L. Doheny, oil magnate, are charged with conspiracy to defraud the government in the Elk Hills naval oil reserve leases.

Conviction would carry a maximum sentence of two years in federal prison and $10,000 fine for each.

It had been announced at the opening of court today that Fall would not take the stand.

Anniversary of Signing
Testimony was concluded on the fourth anniversary of the signing of the second Pearl Harbor contract and the Elk Hills leases by the then Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall, one of the defendants, giving valuable rights on the navy California oil lands to the oil companies of E. L. Doheny, the other defendant. Five years and 12 days ago, Doheny sent $100,000 to Fall in the famous "little brown satchel."

Court adjourned after testimony was concluded.

Each side will have six hours—a full court day—to present summary and arguments.

This will place Justice A. A. Hoehling's charge to the jury late Tuesday or Wednesday after which the case will go to the jury.

PRESIDENT OF NICARAGUA IN FEAR OF WAR

Mexico Prepares to Fight Central American Nation, Says Diaz

(By United Press)
MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Dec. 11.—President Diaz, of Nicaragua, today charged that the government of Mexico was preparing to wage war against his government.

The charge was made in a lengthy manifesto, in which Diaz, who has been recognized by the United States, said the Mexican government was organizing and equipping "an expedition" of formidable proportions to be launched from Puerto, Mexico, against the Atlantic coast of Nicaragua.

Diaz said that success for the alleged Mexican expedition would result in the establishment in Nicaragua of the "manifold evils of Communism and political disorder now only too apparent in Mexico."

"The political issue of the moment," continued Diaz, "is, shall Nicaragua be free from Mexican control, from Communism, from religious persecution, and from all the unhappy political conditions prevailing in Mexico today?"

(A fortnight after the United States had recognized the government of the Conservative president, Diaz, the Mexican government recognized the government of the Liberal president, Sacabia. The Liberals have been in rebellion against the Conservative government.)

GOATHAM SHROUDED BY FOG AND SMOKE

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Daylight did not come to downtown New York at the usual time today.

A heavy fog, mixed with smoke, hung over the city so thick that, at 9 a. m., the city was still practically as dark as night, in some sections.

Top of the skyscrapers, as viewed from the streets, were marked only by the lights in office windows. Unlighted windows were not visible beyond the first few stories. Traffic accidents were numerous and in the harbor ferries were delayed, making many workers late to offices and stores.

PROCEEDINGS ON JURIST QUASHED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Impeachment proceedings against former Federal Judge George W. English, of Illinois, were quashed by the house today.

English resigned a few days before his trial was scheduled to start in the senate, November 10.

The house overwhelmingly adopted a resolution instructing its board of managers, appointed to prosecute English, to inform the senate court of impeachment that the house did not desire to press the charges further.

MYSTERY ENTERS CASE

Keyes Wires from Washington D. C., Demanding That Operator Be Held

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—Chief of Police Morgan A. Collins today flatly turned down an opportunity to arrest Kenneth G. Ormiston, fugitive radio operator from Los Angeles. Sgt. Harry Donnelly, who apprehended Ormiston in Harrisburg, Pa., and returned him to a hiding place in Chicago, appeared before his chief this afternoon with this report:

"I have Ormiston in custody and can produce him at any time you say the word."

"I do not want Ormiston and would not have him around if he were standing here in my office," Collins replied, and the chief did not reprimand Donnelly for his leave of absence during which time he found Ormiston.

(By United Press)
CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—Kenneth G. Ormiston will surrender to authorities upon the receipt of a proper warrant for his arrest, but he will fight extradition to the Pacific coast, the United Press learned today from Ormiston's attorney, Edward H. S. Martin.

"I can produce Ormiston's appearance here at one hour's notice," Martin told the United Press, in one of the first interviews he has granted since he became connected with the case.

"And if the proper warrant is served upon me, I will produce my client."

"Ormiston, however, will positively deny any complicity whatsoever in the Almee McPherson case, in Los Angeles, and he will fight extradition to that city."

Martin answered charges that Ormiston had been promised legal aid if he appeared as a witness against Almee McPherson and stated Ormiston had surrendered of his own free will and accord.

"But the showdown must come here," Martin said. "He will not go any further west than Chicago."

Activity in Police Circles
Unusual activity in the office of Chief of Police Morgan A. Collins today led to the belief that he was planning to arrest Ormiston.

Collins was late in arriving at his office, but when he appeared, he summoned several of his "aces" and went into a prolonged conference with them. There were a number of telephone calls made from the chief's room and one attache remarked:

"It looks like the chief is getting ready to do something."

Ormiston was brought quietly into Chicago last night.

KEYES WIRES TO ARREST ORMISTON
WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—District Attorney Asa Keyes of Los Angeles today wired Chief of Police Collins, of Chicago, to arrest Kenneth G. Ormiston, former Angelus temple radio operator, pending extradition proceedings.

He said the Ormiston case was a sideline with him at present, as he has other business in the east.

After wiring the Chicago police chief, Keyes sent Deputy District Attorney Dennison, at Los Angeles, word of his action.

Keyes appeared annoyed at his subordinate's action in proposing to put the matter in the hands of State's Attorney Crowe, at Chicago.

"I've put it in the hands of the chief of police," he said, "and wired Dennison to that effect. I see no reason to do anything different until I hear further from the police."

Keyes said this afternoon he wanted to give Collins a chance to reply to his request for action. In case Collins refused to hold Ormiston, he would then appeal to Crowe, he said.

Keyes said he expected to stop off in Chicago on his way to Los Angeles, but added, "Nobody will know when I get there."

Keyes came here to testify in the Fall-Doheny oil conspiracy trial.

SERIES HEFTS ARE BARED TO BEACH POLICE

If asserted confessions, made to Huntington Beach police, by W. C. Routh, 22, are true, Routh has been one of the most active young men in Southern California.

Routh was arrested last night by Special Officer Fred Ott. According to Ott, Routh was in the act of removing a spare tire from an automobile when he was detected. Routh's room was searched and officers found a number of automobile radiator ornaments, it was said. Routh confessed to stealing them, police say.

A little later in the evening, Routh is said to have told officers that the roadster he had been driving was stolen. Investigation revealed that the machine was the property of Wallace Wolf, employee of the Standard Oil company, officers disclosed.

Further questioning resulted in the revelation, by Routh, that he had passed two bad checks in Pomona, one in Ontario and one in Huntington Beach, police said.

To climax the disclosures, Chief of Police Jack Tinsley said that he discovered that Routh is on parole from the Oklahoma state reformatory.

Huntington Beach police intend to conduct an exhaustive investigation into Routh's past before deciding what charges to file against him.

VALENTINO MANSION SELLS AT $145,000

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 11.—The Rudolph Valentino residence in Hollywood, went up for sale today at the public auction of the late screen star's properties.

Bidding was scheduled to start at 3 p. m. The Whittier Heights house is not expected to bring as much as "Falcon Lair," Valentino Beverly Hills residence, which went to Jules Howard, New York diamond dealer, for $145,000.

Valentino's riding horses, automobiles and three of his seven dogs were disposed of late yesterday. The sheik's Italian mastiffs brought only $58, although valued at $50 each. His Irish setter was knocked down for $60. Three Great Danes and a Spanish greyhound will be sold Tuesday.

Cy Clegg, of Culver City, bought three of the four blooded riding horses used by Valentino in his pictures. "Diagona" brought $600, "Ramadan" $1000, and "Taquil" $425. "Firefly" was sold to J. Morgan for $1225.

SENT TO PEN AND DOESN'T KNOW WHY

SEATTLE, Dec. 11.—Just why Clarence Samuels, negro, was sent to Walla Walla penitentiary, a year ago, is still a mystery to him, he told Justice of the Peace Chester A. Batchelor, today.

Samuels' state prison experience came to light when he was arraigned and pleaded guilty to a charge that he collected funds for various negro charitable organizations, all more or less mythical.

"What was the charge on which you were sent to Walla Walla?" Batchelor asked the prisoner.

"I don't know, Boss," Samuels answered. "I was in court a year ago. A big man read a lot of things from a piece of paper about robbery, larceny and burglary. A fellow poked me in the ribs and said, 'Say guilty,' so I did, and the next thing I knew I was in the penitentiary."

Man Rushes Into Patrol Wagon to Avoid Standing

SEATTLE, Dec. 11.—"What's your rush?" Patrolman Harry Howard asked Pat Crow, one of a group of alleged "drunks," arrested in the south end of town. Crow had started elbowing his way through bystanders toward the patrol wagon.

"I want to get in first," he replied. "I had to stand up the last time."

Storms Pass In Imperial Valley

EL CENTRO, Dec. 11.—Storm clouds cleared today and allowed the Imperial Valley its first sunshine in 48 hours.

Transportation on the San Diego and Arizona railway, due to landslides between here and San Diego, probably will be crippled for two weeks. The highway to San Diego, although impassable now, is expected to be cleared in several days.

Repair crews working on the Los Angeles highway expected to replace two bridges, washed away in Thursday's storm, and open the road to traffic Monday.

Loss to the lettuce crop is estimated at about 1000 cars.

FINGER-PRINTS TO RESTORE LOST BOY TO HIS MOTHER

Prodigal Son from Iowa Finally Found After Many Years

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Fingerprints—those little black smudgy records that never lie—have at last brought about a solution of one of the strangest mysteries growing out of the World War, according to war department officials.

Fingerprint experts of the government always insist that out of the more than five million prints taken of men in the military and naval service during the World War no two had exactly the same pattern. But a short time ago, the experts found that the fingerprints of Glenn Lee, arrested on a charge of desertion, were identical with those of Harley A. Wade of Centerville, Ia., who volunteered for service in the Iowa National Guard the day after war was declared.

The reliability of fingerprints as a positive means of identification was at stake. The experts began a long investigation and here is the story the ghostly fingerprints finally have told.

When war was declared, Wade was a bellboy in an Ottumwa (Ia.) hotel.

He enlisted and his regiment was at Camp Mills, L. I. in September, 1917. Wade and two others were on a special detail and did not return to their outfit until after the evening mess. Orders had been left for the cook to save food for them, and they sat down to a "big feed," as army meals go.

"What's the idea of all the food?" Wade asked. The cook grinned.

"You better eat all you want, because you're going to be shot at sunrise."

Apparently Wade took the cook's attempted joke seriously. The next morning he failed to respond to reveille and a slit was found in the back of his tent. He had deserted.

Back in Des Moines, the letters of Harley to his mother, Mrs. Isaac Wade, suddenly stopped. The army informed her of his desertion. For months she was confident Harley would show up and atone for his thoughtless act.

No Word From Boy
But months turned into years. Then, one day, the returning troops were welcomed home and still no word of her son. But she still had hope.

Finally, early this year, Mrs. Wade and her husband brought suit to collect their son's insurance on the grounds that his absence of more than seven years made him legally dead.

But insurance companies demand positive proof. The company went to the war department records and found the identical finger prints.

The company insisted young Wade still was living. Mrs. Wade was happy at the thought of having her son back with her. But here again fate again intervened. The records showed that a young man giving the name of Glenn Lee had enlisted in the regular army at Fort Bragg, N. C., and had deserted from the 73rd finance company at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Tex., April 26, 1926, shortly after the Wades instituted their suit to collect the insurance.

Finger Prints Are Similar
The finger prints of Wade and Lee were identical. Their pictures revealed a striking resemblance. Lee was traced to Wadington, and it was found that he had married a girl living in a nearby Virginia town. Mrs. Wade's attorney sought to find her in the hope of restoring the son to his mother, but letters to the wife came back unclaimed.

The Wades against instituted suit to collect the insurance hoping they would force the company to find their son. Again the war department experts insisted Lee in reality was Wade.

Finally information was obtained that a man named Glenn Lee had been arrested and being confined on a charge of army desertion at Fort Sam Houston.

Lee was found in prison garb raking leaves. He says that he is Harley A. Wade.

Wade says he deserted the first time because he wanted to join the marines and get overseas. He claims he enlisted in the marine corps at Quantico, Va., under the name of Glenn Lee, but was kept at Paris navy yard during the war.

After the armistice, he feared to return to his old home because of his desertion from the army and then re-enlisted at Fort Bragg, in 1924, using again the name of Lee.

Last month, he was sentenced to prison. With good behavior his term will expire on December 7, 1927.

"I don't know how my folks got trace of me," Wade said. "I realize now the great mistake I made. I couldn't bear to face my family after I had deserted, but only two weeks ago I did tell the prison chaplain I had a niece living in Centerville, Ia."

"Tell them to write me," he said, as he was taken back to his job of raking leaves.

Back at the Wade home a mother cried for joy.

"Poor lamb!" she shouted. "He was the pick of my lot. Nobody knows whether he has had enough to eat all these years. I hope he can get him back soon and I'll have dinner for him when he gets here. He'll want something to eat when he gets here—he always did."

Another prodigal son will return.

tomobile or its contents," the investigator said.

"If there were any goggles in the machine, I have never seen them," Cohn said. "A newspaperman told me he had found them and was sending them to this office, but they have never arrived."

Cohn intimated that if the goggles existed they had been stolen from the Ormiston coupe before the machine was seized by Los Angeles officers.

Cohn had before him today all of the articles found in the automobile. They included a pair of shoes, believed to have belonged to Ormiston, a portable typewriter, a portable radio set, a man's toilet case, and a large gray overcoat. Inspection of the overcoat disclosed six red hairs, it is claimed.

Fingerprints were taken from all the articles found in the machine.

JUDGES MAKE SELECTION OF WINNING SONG

The winning entry in the Santa Ana song contest, sponsored by the junior chamber of commerce in connection with the concerts to be given next Thursday and Friday nights, by the Santa Ana Boys' chorus, was selected by the judges D. C. Clanton, Clarence Gustin and Ellis Rhodes, but the identity of the composer remained a mystery today.

The song selected was entitled, "Santa Ana, the Eden of the World." A key word accompanied the song, but the identity of the writer, which was to have been made by means of the key word, was not given. The person writing the song was earnestly requested today, by junior chamber of commerce officers, to confer with D. C. Clanton concerning the award. Clanton may be reached tonight or Sunday morning at his residence.

Second prize was won by Mrs. Frank D. Eakin, 412 West Second street.

Third prize was awarded Lyle Anderson, for his song submitted under the nom de plume of "Ralston." Fourth prize was won by a song submitted by Mrs. Clara Chapman and Miss Abby Chapman, the words by the former and the music by the latter.

The first prize is $20, given by Robert Fernandez, of the Terner Typewriter company. J. C. Horton offered the second prize of $10. Stanley Clem offered the third prize of $5 and a fourth prize of $5 was offered by the junior chamber.

The Santa Ana song will be sung for the first time at the concert of the Boys' chorus, Thursday night, in the Santa Ana polytechnic high school.

Huntington Park Newspaper Merger Profits All Parties

Huntington Park people are delighted with the recent consolidation of that town's two newspapers, the Signal and the Sun, reports J. A. Bowen, the proprietor of the consolidated properties. "The readers are getting a much better news service," he says, and the advertisers are getting almost double value for their money.

Mr. Bowen has started a program of expansion. Additional floor space has been secured to house the job department and another job press added. A new Intertype has been installed, giving a battery of four machines. Fifteen men are employed in the mechanical department and ten people in the front office.

Mr. Bowen announces that within another year he will install a tubular press to print sixteen to twenty-four pages.

Vote "No" Dec. 14th

Of the half million bonds voted for Newport seven years ago, we have paid on principal $140,000; in the same time we have paid $154,000 interest, and when the bonds are all retired we will have paid $825,000 for experience.

Now they are asking $650,000 more which, when all paid, will run close to one million, and they tell us it will make no perceptible change in taxes. Do you believe that?

The above amounts would build a nice dam that would hold a lot of flood water and be an everlasting benefit.

I believe that ten millions is the least amount that can possibly build a small permanent sport harbor at Newport, and I think we have no use for any kind of a harbor there at present.

But the water conservation we must have, and a large body of our best citizens are now working to that end, and a bill is being drafted to present to the coming legislature for that purpose, and I believe we will be called upon next summer to vote not less than five millions for conservation.

Let's get the necessities first. Don't be scared at their veiled threats about co-operation. They know that if the ranches go dry there will be no Newport.

Hundreds of people drown all along the coast every year and no amount of bonds will stop it at Newport. Advance in coast land prices are due exclusively to the new Coast highway.

Fifteen million dollars in dams for flood control and conservation in Orange County will bring more new wealth than a 50 million dollar harbor at Newport.

Los Angeles and Long Beach Harbor can handle much more business.

Land owned by the county along the coast is good property and will be very valuable in the future. You all know what an "awful boom" (?) the half million bond issue caused all over Southern California even right in Newport. This next issue will do the same.

We can beat these bonds by a good majority if all who are opposed will go and vote on the 14th. Remember that one vote "NO" kills two votes Yes. Every man and woman has a duty Tuesday. California folks are well fed upon worthless bonds and are swatting them hard all over the state. Neglect everything that day until you have voted and saved nearly a million.

REALTY BOARD RADIO PROGRAM IS BIG SUCCESS

The radio program presented last night, by the Santa Ana Realty board, from Santa Ana station KWTC, was a big success and was received by many radio fans in the state, according to reports received here today.

The program was the first formal opening of the station, installed by Dr. J. W. Hancock, in a specially built room at his residence, 1101 North Ross street.

The program, including vocal and instrumental music and addresses by men well known in the community, was given by the best talent in Santa Ana.

Only one change was made in the announced program. The Lions club quartet was unable to fill its engagement because of the unexpected absence from the city of two members of the organization.

The Misses Gertrude and Henrietta Scheffer substituted with vocal duet numbers and Dorothy Scheffer, 10 years old, entertained with vocal solos.

It probably will be a week before it will be known what reality board will be awarded the box of Christmas oranges, offered by the Santa Ana board as a prize to the board reporting reception of the program from the most remote point.

FATE OF CONDEMNED PRIEST PASSES OUT OF JURISDICTION OF COUNTY SUPERIOR COURT

The fate of the Rev. Phillip Allison Goodwin today passed out of the jurisdiction of the Orange county superior courts, where he was found guilty of the murder of Joseph J. Patterson, bond broker, of Los Angeles, whose body was found by a Mexican in Santa Ana canyon on March 22 of this year.

County Clerk J. M. Backs announced that he had forwarded a copy of the complete record in the case to the state supreme court, following the appeal to the higher tribunal, perfected by Attorneys Kitt Gould and William Menton for the defendant. The copy of the court proceedings occupied six volumes of stenographic reporting and was described by the official court reporters, Gene Hoff, Lester Slack and Mrs. Birdie Swanwick, as one of the longest criminal appeals ever sent to the supreme court from Orange county.

Within 15 days after the filing of the copy of the record with the state's highest court, the defense must file its opening brief. The state is given 10 days in which to answer by brief and the final defense answering brief must be filed within 10 days after the state's statement, according to District Attorney A. P. Nelson. A representative of the state attorney general will argue the case for the state, Nelson's official connection with the case concluding with the formal filing of the copy of the record.

Will Stay Execution
The regular court routine of passing upon the appeal automatically will stay execution of the sentence of capital punishment by hanging, passed upon Goodwin by Superior Judge E. J. Marks, the date for the execution having been set for January 14, 1927. If the appeal is denied, Goodwin will be returned to Orange county and sentenced by Judge Marks, it was said.

"I don't see where the defense has a leg to stand on in this appeal. Only the regular statutory exceptions are listed in the ground for the appeal. I can't see where there is any flaw in the proceedings for them to shoot at," said Nelson.

While the fate of Goodwin rests with the state supreme court, Albert Dewey Gaines, also charged with the murder of Patterson, will begin taking the steps that either will land him in the superior court for trial on the murder charge or will set him free from the clutches of the law. In which he has been held fast since last July, when he was arrested in Montana and brought to Santa Ana.

The preliminary hearing of Gaines, after two postponements, has been set for Wednesday morning, December 15, before Justice of the Peace Kenneth Morrison. Gaines, who gave the principal evidence in the conviction of the 28-year-old American Catholic priest, has said that he will tell the same story in the justice court. James Halvorsen, of Los Angeles, formerly of Gaines' home town, Ogden, Utah, and Otto Jacobs, of Santa Ana, will represent the "Utah cowboy." The state probably will be represented by District Attorney Nelson or Chief Criminal Deputy David Wetlin.

Says Story Punctured
Nelson announced that the supposed story of the killing of Patterson, as related in a letter sent to himself and Attorney Kitt Gould by a man who signed himself, "J. Mackelbride," had been further punctured by the discovery, in Los Angeles, that a ring, pawned by a man who gave a Crown Hill address, where Goodwin and Gaines resided, had been left by a Van Nuys officer. "Mackelbride" had stated in his letter that this ring had been taken from Patterson by Gaines. "Mackelbride," who had agreed with Gould to meet in the office of the San Diego county district attorney, never has appeared on the scene since, if he appeared at that time. Gould has expressed the opinion that he did appear in San Diego, but that the prosecution would not allow the little defense lawyer to question him.

Contractor Will Have Three Days To Resume Work

J. P. Steele, contractor on the Brea-Olinda high school, who is asserted to be in financial difficulties, will be given three days in which to resume work on the structure, when the high school board meets in the Laurel school, in Brea, Monday, according to information given out today at the board office.

It is reported that the Metropolitan Casualty company, with which Steele is bonded, was forced to pay the wages of workmen last week.

In case Steele is unable to go ahead with the work within the three days, the casualty company will make arrangements to finish the job, it is understood.

Reynolds, who with Dr. Reynolds and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Winslow are enjoying a delightful trip. The letter was written aboard the S. S. Ecuador, upon which the travelers are voyaging and was mailed at Acajutla, Guatemala, Central America. Mrs. Reynolds states that all were in good health, had not been seasick and that the ocean had been as smooth as glass with the exception of one day.

BACHELORS ARE ARRESTED. BUT IT'S JUST FUN

As the climax of a series of initiation stunts, the candidates being taken into the Brotherhood of Bachelors, at the Santa Ana junior college, were placed under arrest, last night, by officers B. A. Hershey and H. E. Holmes, of the Santa Ana police department, and charged with disturbing the peace.

The arrest was "framed" but the officers carried out their parts so realistically that the candidates were alarmed over having to appear in court and possibly pay fines.

Ten candidates were initiated into the order. They were Wallace Geren, Gerald Twist, Spencer Stewart, Gerald Edwards, Ralph Stuart, Lee Staton, Edwin Settle, Milton Chaffee, Melvin Harter and Winthrop Gordon.

Early in the evening the candidates, were required to parade through the street, stopping at corners to call for taxis.

The victims joined in song and made speeches, while audiences gathered. After the initiation program was completed, the candidates were taken to the home of Ross Fields, one of the bachelors. There they walked the plank and took the oath. Finally, the constitution was read to them and they took the vow of Neitzsche, pledging to invite all their brothers to a banquet at the time of their marriage.

Skating Hobo Arrested In Beach City

The "skating hobo" made his appearance in Orange county today. William Mann, 25, who says that his home is in Detroit, was arrested in Huntington Beach today by Officers John Stanton and A. E. Barnister, when Mann passed the officers on his roller skates.

At the police station, in the beach city, Mann said that he had skated all the way from San Francisco to Huntington Beach and that he hoped to make his way east by the same method.

According to officers, Mann may have to postpone his eastern tour.

"My Business Is Developing"

Confidence Have Faith in these People Read

To Citizens of Santa Ana and Vicinity—

The HARBOR ENTRANCE GET OUT THE VOTE COMMITTEE is addressing you to enlist your full support for the Harbor Entrance Bonds, to be voted Tuesday, December 14th.

At our last election, Santa Ana, as a community, voted better than five to one in favor of the bonds. It is very obvious that a great majority of our citizens are in favor of the bonds. If Santa Ana had voted six to one, the Harbor Bonds would have carried. It takes two-thirds majority to carry, so we are making this appeal to you at this time, to come to the colors and assist our committee to make Santa Ana 100 per cent strong.

There has been much argument presented on this subject. The financial benefits that surely will accrue to all citizens and taxpayers of Orange County, in proportion to the small cost should be enough to encourage all fair-minded citizens to vote YES on this proposition.

Also, there is another side that many are prone to overlook, the danger confronting those who desire to use the entrance to Newport Bay. This danger will practically be eliminated when the new jetty is installed on the east side, the old one made stronger and the entrance dredged out, to make passage possible.

Spend as much time and say as much as you can for this good cause and thus place in Orange County Harbor an outstanding factor for usefulness and safety in this community.

Yours for co-operation.

ELI AND THE BOY SAMUEL

TEXT: I SAMUEL 3:1-10, 15-19

And the child Samuel ministered unto the Lord before Eli. And the word of the Lord was precious in those days; there was no open vision.

And it came to pass at that time, when Eli was laid down in his place, and his eyes began to wax dim, that he could not see.

And ere the lamp of God went out in the temple of the Lord, where the ark of God was, and Samuel was laid down to sleep;

That the Lord called Samuel: and he answered, Here am I.

And he ran unto Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou calledst me. And he said, I called not; lie down again. And he went and lay down.

And the Lord called yet again, Samuel. And Samuel arose, and went to Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou didst call me. And he answered, I called not, my son; lie down again.

Now Samuel did not yet know the Lord, neither was the word of the Lord yet revealed unto him.

And the Lord called Samuel again the third time. And he arose, and went to Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou didst call me. And Eli perceived that the Lord had called the child.

Therefore Eli said unto Samuel, go, lie down: and it shall be, if he call thee, that thou shalt say, Speak, Lord: for thy servant heareth.

And the Lord came, and stood, and called as at other times, Samuel. Then Samuel answered, Speak; for thy servant heareth.

And Samuel lay until the morning, and opened the doors of the house of the Lord; and Samuel feared to show Eli the vision.

Then Eli called Samuel, and said, Samuel, my son. And he answered, Here am I.

And he said, What is the thing that the Lord hath said unto thee? I pray thee hide it not from me: God do so to thee, and more also, if thou hide any thing from me of all the things that he said unto thee.

And Samuel told him every whit, and hid nothing from him. And he said, Is the Lord; let him do what seemeth him good.

And Samuel grew, and the Lord was with him, and did let none of his words fail to the ground.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. C.
Editor of The Congregationalist

The story of Samuel, from every point of view, is one of the most beautiful recorded anywhere. It is a story that must appeal particularly to mothers for it expresses so much of the longings, aspirations, and triumphs of motherhood; it is a story peculiarly adapted for children because its central figure and its hero is after all the boy Samuel; and it is a story of general interest be-smartness beyond his years, no precociousness and presumption, but a pleasing simplicity. He is not expecting revelations; there is nothing of that Phariseism of the spoiled child of privilege; he seems to have imbibed the simple and devout spirit of his mother.

The relations of Eli with Samuel are very beautiful. When the little lad comes to Eli twice, assuming that the latter had called him, Eli perceives that he has heard another voice, and so he gives Samuel good advice. When he hears the voice again he is to say humbly, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth."

The message that Samuel had was not very encouraging or pleasant to Eli, but Eli again showed good judgment and a good spirit in taking that message without any malice or jealousy against the messenger. He gave Samuel, at that moment, a lesson in faith and in self-control. He recognized the justice of God's judgment even though he suffered from them, and he said, "It is the Lord, let him do what seemeth him good."

Wise Guidance

In this atmosphere Samuel had his training. He had, first of all, the heritage of a good mother and father; he had the influence of a holy environment; he had the inspirations of an early call and a sense of purpose; and he had the wise counsel and guidance of Eli.

Not every man, even with all the influences in his life favorable, has attained to mastery and service. But Samuel, like a greater child of a later period in Israel, apparently grew in wisdom and in stature and in favor with God and man. From childhood to old age he is the type of a consecrated, intelligent, capable spiritual leader, a man who combined in his character and services the noblest aspects of the priest and prophet and the skill and sagacity of a statesman.

Our lesson tells how the child was father of the man.

Ebell Sections Hold Annual Holiday Parties

Fourth Household Economics

Santa Claus was very busy yesterday afternoon in the vicinity of Ebell clubhouse, and while members of the fourth household economics section were enjoying a marvelous Christmas dinner as guests of Mrs. Maud M. Peacock, Mrs. Henry D. Meyer and Mrs. George Goodwin, he evidently slipped into the lounge and deposited a bewildering array of gifts on a Christmas tree that was providentially standing in a corner.

It was the annual Christmas party of the section and hospitality and merriment reigned supreme. Dinner (for it was more a dinner menu than luncheon) was served at 1 o'clock, in the section room where the tables were very lovely with scarlet candles, clusters of cottons and nut baskets while wee candle place cards were in harmony. Ruby mounds of cranberry jelly, plates of red and green candy and pale green of the molded salad, continued the colorful effect.

A menu of roast turkey with the delicious dishes that fittingly accompany the prince of fowls, was served. Returning to the lounge with its added adornment of holly, mistletoe and the glittering "Christmas tree," a few moments were devoted to the necessary business session conducted by the leader, Mrs. Charles Mitchell. Decision was reached to have a general card party and the date of February 17 was tentatively set.

Mrs. Nona Franklin was greeted as a new member, completing the section's required membership of 27. Mrs. L. C. Fairbanks, Mrs. Bond and Mrs. S. J. Hales, former members, were greeted as guests. Mrs. Bond having come from her home near Hollywood to be present. Mrs. V. Y. Connell and Mrs. Eleanor Elliott completed the guest list and added on the program planned by the three hostesses.

Mrs. Charles Johnson gave a clear and concise report of the recent leaders' section meeting of the society which she attended in place of Mrs. Mitchell. The program which followed opened with songs by Mrs. Connell who played her own accompaniments, making the numbers very effective. Her voice, sweet and clear, gave a great deal of pleasure to her hearers. The numbers she sang were "In the Garden of My Heart" and "If I Knew." Mrs. Elliott gave two readings, a Christmas number, "Franklin and Myrrh" by Heywood Brown and "Cold" by Arthur Guitman.

The gift exchange was then introduced, Mrs. Peacock, in charge of the program, selecting the first package, and its recipient then selecting the next. The gifts were very lovely and extremely varied. The hostesses had graciously provided for their guests as well, so everyone was visited by Santa Claus before the afternoon was over.

Mrs. Peacock, Mrs. Goodwin and Mrs. Meyer were highly complimented upon the deliciousness of their dinner and the pleasant afternoon they had provided as Christmas hostesses.

First Travelers

One of the delightful Christmas parties of the week was the gathering of the First Travel section of Ebell, which was held in a private dining room at St. Ann's Inn, with Mrs. George S. Smith, Mrs. Terry E. Stephenson and Mrs. Stephen Ross as genial hostesses.

The tables and room were prettily decorated for the occasion in yellow, pink and lavender, the flowers being artistically arranged in baskets and vases. A real Christmas luncheon, with turkey as the piece de resistance, was served with all of the accessories.

Daintily wrapped gifts were exchanged, as is the custom with these old friends, who have been meeting together for many years, the only members absent for the Christmas reunion being Mrs. J. L. Dryer and Mrs. Lin L. Shaw, both of whom are ill.

Following the luncheon, the members attended the Stefanosson lecture at the high school. Besides the hostesses those participating in the joyous event were Mesdames A. W. Ames, J. W. Bishop, J. P. Baumgartner, H. C. Davies, Mary Heathman, C. S. Kendall, W. M. Smart, I. W. Van Allee, W. E. Otis, E. B. Smith, Alice Tubbs and J. E. Gowen.

Farewell Party for Mrs. Cleary

Mrs. Margaret M. Hallicy entertained a company of friends of Mrs. Joseph Cleary at her home on Thursday afternoon, as a farewell courtesy for Mrs. Cleary, who, with her family have broken up their home here and are going to Hawthorne to live.

The living rooms were decorated with chrysanthemums. Five hundred was the diversion for the afternoon, Mrs. Harry Gaspar being awarded the first prize and Mrs. R. R. Trueblood the consolation. Mrs. Cleary was surprised with a shower of dainty handkerchiefs from her friends.

Dainty refreshments were served on the small tables by the hostess, whose guests were, besides the honoree, Mesdames Hillested, Charles Borchard, Logue, Vardy, Gaspar, Kelley, Crotty, Burns, Trueblood, Ferris, Ecker, Schulte, the Misses Mary and Josephine Grossman, B. M. Connolly and the Rev. Father P. C. Connolly.

Christmas Background Employed for Pretty Home Wedding

Motoring happily over California boulevards, Mr. and Mrs. Howard A. Barrows are enjoying their honeymoon far from the watchful attentions of friends, kept in ignorance of the plans of the young people, whose wedding was a simple but charming event of Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Barrows was Miss Hazel Liggett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Liggett, Tustin avenue. The charming home of her sister, Mrs. A. H. Allen, 614 South McClay street, was the scene of the nuptials to which only the members of the two families were bidden. The Allen home was brilliantly decorated for Christmas and the bright holidays appointments were extremely effective as a bridal background.

Miss Liggett was beautifully gowned in shell-pink chiffon studded with rhinestones and fashioned over crepe de chine. Her flowers were brides' roses with maidenhair fern. As she entered the room with Mr. Barrows, it was to the strains of "Lohengrin" Wedding March played by Miss Mabel Marchant.

The ceremony was read impressively by the Rev. H. G. Burgess, former pastor of the Richmond Avenue Methodist church, who came from his Los Angeles home for the occasion. Following the ceremony, wedding refreshments were served before the young couple left for their honeymoon. For traveling, Mrs. Barrows chose midnight blue charmeuse, gold embroidered, with which her smart hat and cloak harmonized.

Upon their return, the young people will be at home to their friends at 421 South Ross street. Mrs. Barrows is a graduate of Santa Ana Junior college. Mr. Barrows, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Barrows, 206 1-2 Spurgeon avenue, is associate manager of the Barrows Construction company of which his father is head. After his work at junior college he went east to finish his course at Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Daughters of Confederacy

Thursday afternoon's chilly breezes seemed to urge United Daughters of the Confederacy away from their homes and to the December meeting of the organization at the home of Mrs. T. J. Haughton, 423 South Sycamore street, where they were rewarded by that special brand of southern hospitality for which the home is noted.

Yellow Japanese chrysanthemums lent their bright glow to the living room and in the adjoining dining-room where the latter part of the afternoon was spent in interesting manner, every decorative detail was eloquent of the approach of Christmas.

Expressive of Christmas, too, was the entertainment program arranged by the hostess and which opened with the Victrola record of "Holy Night, Silent Night," sung by Madame Schumann Heink. Miss Mary-Anna Deaver, a talented little maid, pleased her audience with both piano and expression numbers, playing first a Paderewski Minuet, and then giving three readings, "The Reward of the Christmas Candle," "An Ad" (James Montague) and "The Tomboy" by Walter Ben Hare.

Two solos sung by Mrs. Arthur May in her faultless manner, increased the enjoyment of the afternoon. They were "The Birthday of a King" by Nellie and "This Is My Task." Miss Hester Covington played her accompaniments. A negro dialect reading by that past master of the dialect, Miss

NEW YORK, December 11.—Of all the silk family no two materials remain so steadfastly feminine, so alluring and so picturesque as taffeta and moire.

You can make tailored frocks and evening gowns that suggest the sport frock of such diaphanous material as chiffon, or such regal material as lame cloth, or velvet.

You can make a chemise frock of beads and sequins, and you can subdue lace to the point of masculine plainness, but if you use taffeta or moire, you have to treat it right. You have to make an important frock. You have to use some material in it and have length as well as width in your skirt.

Fashion's Favorite

With styles more influenced by the Directorate period when women looked their loveliest and dressed with less regard for practical considerations than today, it is logical that these two fabrics should be leading the fashion parade.

For more than a year now, the picture frock, with its molded bodice and full skirt has triumphed, and is constantly being developed in more exquisite color combinations.

Nothing delights me more than to costume a play, or a wedding party, and feature these frocks in rainbow colors—when the women involved are tall and sylphlike. Or nothing is more depressing than the heavy-set figure affecting this quaint style.

Photographed today are two models that are proving very successful with New York debutantes, both developed in moire. The model at the left is of pink moire banded with mulberry colored moire. Its distinctive trimming is a knot of the darker silk which forms a center panel, with ends hanging down the front. The skirt is short in front, and slim at the sides in spite of much fascinating fullness.

For Brunets, Too

The other model also is pink—in incidentally pink is exceedingly smart now in Paris—embroidered in bands of crystals and rhinestones. This one also is short in front and swirls round the heels in a low dip. After pink, there is a deep ivory shade, positively irresistible in moire, which particularly enhances a brunet's charms.

In taffetas, all the pastel shades are fashionable, with an emphasis on the blue shades, and black taffeta is quite the smartest thing you can possibly own. Particularly if relieved with white. White organza and black taffeta form a classical combination, and of course black taffeta and black have have black taffeta and black lace have ties ever since it was first introduced ages ago.

French flowers of velvet, silk or chiffon, and the ornaments of beads and crystal, as well as motifs of pearls and rhinestones are perfect trimmings for these frocks, and fancy ribbons of velvet and tissue, and gold and silver laces are very youthful.

No matter how many practical frocks one may own, it is always an evidence of feminine wisdom to own one of these gowns that makes no pretense of being anything but beautiful and ornamental.

Linda Paul, was most enjoyable. "Matrimony" was her selection. Mrs. Lula Johnson sang a little song which she declared to be nameless but which was very lovely. The program closed with Christmas carols in which all joined.

A friendly social hour followed and refreshments appropriate to the season were served by Mrs. Haughton and her co-hostesses, Mrs. W. B. Ritter, Mrs. Barger and Miss Cora Lee Ritter.

Hearts Offer Program Of Afternoon Party At White Gables

An afternoon card party which was declared by those so fortunate as to be present, to be one of the prettiest of the holiday season, was given yesterday by Mrs. William Watkins at "White Gables," her beautiful big home at 1342 North Ross street.

Garlands of Yuletide scarlet, hung with icicles, converted the suite of drawing and living rooms into a veritable Christmas bower while the usual contrast of bright greens was offered by the sun-room with its ferns and glossy greenery.

Hearts formed the afternoon amusement and Mrs. W. O. Hill held high score for which she was rewarded with a jar of fine bath salts. Second prize of a silk handkerchief was presented Mrs. Lucy Avas while an hour glass consoling Mrs. Vada Panky. Decked with exquisite linens, the tables were then utilized for serving home-made cake, sugared walnuts, candies, rosy apples and coffee. The plates were adorned with red and doliies centering the table were edged with the same gay Christmas color. Mrs. Riesland and Mrs. Tyrrell aided in serving.

Mrs. Watkins' guests included Mesdames William Keseman, Maude Swarthout, Nellie Young, Vada Panky, W. O. Hill, Lucy Avas, Horace Head, Mollie Tyrrell, Clara Meacham, Mabel Avas, H. F. Roberts and Zella Riesland.

Register Bride Given Surprise Shower As Christmas Event

Complimenting Mrs. Howard ("Bart") Cook, formerly Miss Gertrude Linsenbard, who, while not the latest Register bride, yet was the one who most recently announced her wedding, a delightful party was given last night at the William H. McKay home, 607 South Birch street, by Mrs. McKay and Mrs. Burhl Wing of Orange.

It was appropriate that the two should join in complimenting Mrs. Cook, for Mrs. McKay's husband, William McKay, is head of the Register circulation department where she has been employed and which yields so many victims to Dan Cupid, while Mrs. Wing was formerly Miss Clara Kramer, of the same department, and one of the brides of the autumn.

Their hospitality took the form of a miscellaneous shower combined with a Christmas party, and the McKay home was even more delightful than usual with its holly and Yuletide decorations which included a small Christmas tree glittering above a field of snow.

Tables were arranged with varnished card-table covers in readiness for bridge, and Santa Claus taffies were distributed. At the close of the contest, Christmas-like packages were distributed to those making special scores. Mrs. E. E. Christenson received a lovely little framed glimpse of San Juan Capistrano mission; Mrs. Ben Herrick won a bridge deck of cards and a huge peppermint candy cane consoling Miss Winifred Iman.

Since the distribution of the prizes was such an appropriate time to shower Mrs. Cook, the hostesses produced a huge box covered with flame-colored crepe paper to harmonize with the general effect, and the honoree had the pleasure of delving into its contents. Silver, linens, pottery and glass all were represented in the gift assortment.

For the little supper, the hostesses substituted embroidered linens for vivid card-table covers and centered each table with tall whip tapers, alternating Christmas reds and greens. Candies and nuts were served in tiny tarleton bags which made most attractive favors. Mrs. McKay's unexcelled plum pudding with hard sauce was served with coffee.

Guests enjoying the affair were Mrs. Marian Knight, Mrs. Ben Herrick, Mrs. Cecyl Drake, Mrs. Eleanor Elliott, Mrs. Tom Shedd, Mrs. Troy Smith, Mrs. G. V. Linsenbard, Mrs. Italy Lee, Mrs. Henry Eggert, Mrs. Burton Wright, Mrs. E. E. Christenson, Mrs. J. Ogden Markel, Mrs. Amsel McDourow, Miss Helen Lutz, Miss Rhea McDow, Miss Helen Moore, Miss Louise Stephenson, Miss Gene Miller, Miss Beatrice Kelley, Miss Della Iman and Miss Winifred Iman, together with the hostesses and honoree, Mrs. McKay, Mrs. Wing and Mrs. Cook.

CHURCH SOCIETIES

Lutheran Aid

The December meeting of the St. Peter Lutheran Aid society, was an enjoyable event of yesterday afternoon when the members gathered at the church parlors. The program was on the theme, "Our Home Mission Vision" and yielded matters of interest and value to each member.

A business meeting was followed by a social hour during which appetizing refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Sam Anderson and Mrs. S. Carson.

Berean Class

Among the merry Christmas parties held recently was that of the United Presbyterian Bereans who met Thursday evening at the lovely home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Dunbar on Eastside avenue. A delightful informality marked the progress of games and entertainment.

A variety of stunts and races occupied the evening hours, and refreshments of cherry jello, with whipped cream, served with wafers and coffee, carried out the Christmas motif.

Those present besides the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Dunbar, included: Messrs and Mesdames Anderson, Horbert, Henderson, Hoy, Knyper, Hillman, McFadden, D. McBurney, W. McBurney, Porter, Reed, Reiman, Torrens, J. Thompson, Walker, Warren, the Rev. W. H. McPeak, Steele Finley, Dr. and Mrs. Henry, Miss Nellie Oting, the Mesdames Beall, Hoskins, Johnston, S. Thompson.

The Fullerton Tribune Dec. 9th, Said VOTE FOR ORANGE COUNTY HARBOR ENTRANCE and its Editorial reads:

Following are a few reasons why the entrance bond proposition should be supported by the entire county:

From the standpoint of safety. The loss of life has been such that any county, to save lives, ought to be willing to spend the small sum proposed, even if the project had no commercial advantages, which it has.

It will bring new wealth to the county. We must create new values to keep down the taxes. Existing property is assessed about as high as it should be.

Co-operative support, which must be given to all county-wide matters. Without co-operation between the different sections of Orange county, the county cannot progress.

Building up the county for the children now at school. We must do everything possible to keep them here.

Attraction it will add to the ones the county now possesses. It will be the only county having what all other counties have to a degree, good roads, good schools, towns, farms, groves, homes, etc., in addition Orange county will have the great asset in its harbor.

If we do not take advantage of what we have and develop it, we will lose prestige.

It will stimulate activity all along the line. Work will be started on many programs now held up. It will directly and indirectly provide employment for many workers in all parts of Orange county.

The cost is small—3 15-100c per $100 of county assessed value. A dime—ten cents on $1000 worth of property—actual value.

It will only need the addition of four million dollars of NEW assessed values to take care of the entire cost.

There are projects now pending which will be put into operation as soon as Orange county moves the entrance.

With approximately 85 per cent of ocean frontage now reserved for the public and the prospect of a full 100 per cent becoming the property of the city of Newport Beach in the near future, Orange County Harbor city takes the lead in ownership of ocean frontage in the United States.

Voters, do your duty next Tuesday, go to the polls and vote for the Orange county harbor entrance bonds.

WHAT THE BONDS WILL COST THE INDIVIDUAL TAXPAYER

As most of the opposition to the bonds issue proposed for the improvement of the entrance to Newport bay is based on what the improvement would cost the taxpayer, it seems pertinent again to state the facts as to the cost. Or, rather, to let County Auditor Jerome state the facts.

County Auditor William C. Jerome says the cost of improving the harbor entrance, according to the plans upon which the proposed $650,000 bonds issue is based will be as follows:

"The first year's tax rate would be 4 cents on each $100 of assessed valuation. The average tax rate for the 20-year period will be .0315 per $100 of assessed valuation. These rates are based on present valuations.

"Thus a five-acre orange grove (worth $15,000) assessed at about $4500 would pay taxes on $4500 at 3.15 cents per $100, or actually a total tax of $14.14 a year. The average annual tax on a $3000 home—that is, a house and lot worth $3000 and assessed at about $900—will be 28 1-3 (twenty-eight and one-third) cents."

As a farmer writes: "I shall vote 'Yes.' The cost is nominal. It strikes me that the investment in harbor entrance bonds of a dime a year per $1000 worth of property is a good business proposition for anyone owning real estate anywhere in Orange county."

Now, in connection with these facts, consider the further fact that the county owns land and frontage on the harbor as follows:

On the lower bay: On the county channel 19 acres, frontage 2900 feet; on the Balboa island channel, 40 acres, frontage 4500 feet; on channel to upper bay, 396 acres, additional area under easement, 223 acres a grand total of 678 acres with a frontage of about 29,000 feet.

A fair estimate of the value of this land on the lower bay would be about $5000 an acre.

All Orange county will benefit from a harbor. Prof. Donaldson, of Fullerton, an authority on harbors and world travel, says: "Generally the greatest development as a result of a harbor is from 10 to 25 miles or even 40 miles away. Los Angeles harbor is a good example of this truth."

TWO MEN END THRILLING TRIP ACROSS DESERT

W. L. Grubb, 119 Edgewood drive, and George Wiseman, Denison, Ariz., have just returned from an 11-day trip through the desert, which, from their reports, was a thrilling one. The two men were in many storms, visited the city of Blythe, Calif., when the town was flooded, and crossed the desert on a road which was little more than a trail.

The two men were unable to make an average of more than 30 miles a day while crossing the desert. The distance between water holes on the desert was 95 miles. Storms and washouts hindered their progress and once Wiseman wandered away from camp and became lost in the desert. He was gone several hours and did not return until night, when Grubb built a large fire as a guide for his lost companion.

Grubb and Wiseman left Santa Ana late in November. They traveled to Imperial valley and Yuma, crossed the Colorado river and started east on the Phoenix road. Here they encountered a new agricultural country, according to Grubb. The traveler declared that the district on the north side of the Gila river is one of the most fertile agriculture sections he has ever seen. The water wells there especially attracted his attention.

From this district the two men decided to cross the desert to Castle Dome and return to California by way of Blythe.

According to Grubb, the scenery in the desert country was the most beautiful he has ever seen on his many travels.

The men returned to Santa Ana today. They covered 800 miles on the trip, the purpose of which was hunting quail. Grubb, declared, however, that no quail were seen.

had visited many institutions. She told of the 36 boarding homes for children in Orange county, and also of the juvenile home and the Orange county hospital. She related plans of the Orange Woman's club to extend Christmas cheer to the latter and the local club decided to try to bring added cheer to the children in the boarding homes.

Roll call was answered with events of current interest and then Charles Best, advertising manager of the Excelsior creamery and a most interesting speaker, was introduced. While the general theme of his talk was conservation, he applied it in a different manner and spoke of conservation of health and character. Dividing the day into three equal parts of eight hours each, he spoke of the conservation of health and time as belonging in the third division. The clubwomen listened with close attention and expressed their appreciation of his talk with much enthusiasm.

The remainder of the afternoon was purely social and as the members remained to chat and enjoy the friendly atmosphere of the home, Mrs. Watkins served big red apples, stuffed dates, glazed nuts and bonbons.

White Fruit Cake Recipe Is Submitted

A few days ago, a perplexed reader of the woman's pages of the Register, requested a recipe for a white fruit cake. We take for granted that she means one as white as is possible for a cake to be and yet be rich and moist with fruit.

One of the best ones we know requires one cup butter, two cups sugar, seven egg whites beaten until stiff; 2 1/2 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, and one pound each of raisins, dates, almonds, white raisins and citron. No milk, water or coffee is required. Cream the butter and sugar. Chop the fruit (not too fine) and sift flour and baking powder together and dredge the fruit. Add to butter-sugar mixture and add the stiffly beaten eggs last. This will fill two good-sized tins and should be baked an hour and a half.

Since fruit cakes form a most acceptable Christmas gift, and not all home cooks possess a standard recipe, we will add two others to the white recipe, an eggless and a dark fruit cake.

Even if you never have attempted to bake a fruit cake, you need have no compunctions, for its one of the most comfortable to work with. It can be light and fluffy, as we expect other cakes to be, for there's so much fruit in it it just naturally has to be solid and firm. The one essential for the perfect cake is moisture, and to insure this quality, steam the cake. Line the pans with heavy oiled paper and there will be no hard corners or edges. A tube pan is particularly good, since it permits heat to penetrate from the center as well as the edges.

Eggless Fruit Cake

One pound fat salt pork, 2 cups boiling water, 2 cups light brown sugar, 1 1/2 cups molasses, 1 nutmeg, 2 tablespoons cinnamon, 1 tablespoon cloves, 1 pound seeded raisins, 1 pound currants, 1/2 pound dates, 1/2 pound citron, 1/2 pound candied cherries, 2 cups chopped nut meats, 4 tablespoons strong cold coffee, 4 tablespoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon soda, 8 cups flour, 1 tablespoon vanilla.

Remove rind and bits of lean meat from salt pork. Chop fat very finely and put into a large mixing bowl. Pour over boiling water and let stand until cool. The boiling water will melt most of the fat pork. Add sugar and molasses. Mix and sift all but 1 cup of flour with spices and baking powder and soda. Mix prepared fruit with 1 cup of flour. Add coffee and vanilla to first mixture. Stir well and mix thoroughly. Turn into prepared pans and steam two hours. Bake half an hour and cool.

The raisins must be chopped, the currants cleaned, the dates stoned and chopped and the citron sliced and shredded. The nutmeg is grated.

This cake can be baked in a slow oven for two and one-half hours if steaming is inconvenient. Cover with buttered paper during baking. The following fruit cake is rich and black and thoroughly delicious. Thin slices of this cake are ideal to serve with tea or one of the hot fruit drinks to holiday callers.

Fruit Cake

Two cups butter, 1 cup brown sugar, 10 eggs, 1 cup molasses, 1 cup grape juice or sweet cider, 4 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 tablespoon cinnamon, 1 tablespoon allspice, 1 teaspoon cloves, 1 nutmeg, 3-4 cake chocolate, 2 pounds seeded raisins, 1 pound candied currants, 1 pound seedless raisins, 1 pound citron, 1/2 pound candied cherries, 1/2 pound candied pineapple, 1-4 pound candied orange peel, 1-4 pound candied lemon peel, 2 1/2 cups blanched and shredded almonds, 2 tablespoons vanilla, 1/2 teaspoon of salt.

Prepare fruit and almonds. If citron must be sliced and shredded, the task will be made much easier if the fruit is warmed before trying to cut. Mince lemon and orange peels. Mix prepared fruits and sift 1 cup flour over them. Stir well with a fork. Mix and sift remaining flour with spices, salt and soda. Cream butter and slowly beat in sugar. Add eggs, well beaten. Mix thoroughly and add molasses, cider and vanilla. Add flour and stir until perfectly blended. Add chocolate melted over hot water. Add prepared fruit and nuts and mix well. Turn at once into deep pans and steam three hours. Bake in a slow oven for one hour after steaming.

The cherries are cut in halves and the pineapple cut in thin slices. Fasten heavy oiled paper over the top of the cake pans to prevent moisture from getting into the cake during steaming to prevent it from leaving the cake.

If fruit cake must be baked, keep the oven very "slow" and put the cake pans into a larger pan containing about an inch of hot water.

When cake is taken from the oven, place on a clean towel on a cake cooler or bread board. Pull cloth over pan to completely cover it. Let stand fifteen minutes and then lift off pan. Turn cake right side up and let stand until cold. Wrap in heavy waxed paper and keep in a tight tin box until needed. The rich fruit cake should be baked nearly three weeks before Christmas in order to "ripen," but the eggless cake will be very good in a week's time.

University Women Have Holiday Program

A Christmas program planned by Mrs. Robert Northcross, offered entertainment to members of the University Women's club, assembled Thursday evening in the lounge of Ebell clubhouse. Simple but effective decorations added to the charm of the dignified room and a tall tree laden with Christmas ornaments, bore candy canes for each one present.

The program opened with a brief talk on the harbor bonds by M. R. Hawk. Miss Edith Cornell, one of the community's most popular soloists, sang three numbers with Miss Ruth Armstrong at the piano. "Simeon," "Christ, Friend to Little Children" and "The Three Kings" were her delightful selections.

Miss Nellie Mai Chapman, talented expression pupil of Gladys Simpson Shafer gave two very enjoyable readings, "Japanese Tale" and "Master of All Masters" (humorous) and an encore number, "Reflections." Jack Langley was introduced as violinist and Miss Mary Bruner as his accompanist. Two folk songs by Kreisler, "Forbidden Music" and "Indian Love Call" from the opera "Rose Marie," were his selections, beautifully rendered.

Miss Myrtle M. Martin, director of music at Santa Ana junior college, offered the High School-Junior College Men's quartette composed of Messrs. Stewart, Bates, Goodwin and Fliske. They sang "Little Town of Bethlehem," "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing" in finished manner and were followed by the College Women's club ensemble which brought the program to its conclusion with "Hark the Herald Angels Sing."

The evening closed with refreshments in keeping with the season, and a social hour during which the wishing canes were distributed from the tree. Orange members will plan the next meeting.

S. A. Woman's Club

White Gables, the spacious home of Mrs. William Watkins, radiated hospitality on a recent afternoon when Santa Ana Woman's club members were entertained. Mrs. Watkins made her home gay with symbols of the Yuletide, using poinsettias, holly and vivid Christmas decorations throughout the large rooms.

Mrs. W. S. Chandler, president of the club, was unable to be present so her place was taken in capable manner by the vice president, Mrs. M. C. Williams, who conducted the usual routine of opening and business matters. The latter included the announcement that the next meeting would be held with Mrs. G. J. Fosbaugh on North Broadway on December 21. Also attention was called to the fact that Mr. and Mrs. George Slocum would reach the golden anniversary of their wedding on December 13.

Mrs. C. F. Crose opened the program with a talk on institutional relations in preparation for which she and Mrs. Wanda Muir Hanna, state chairman of that department,

"WHERE YOU SEE THE BIG ONES"

Colleen Moore as she appears in "Twinkletoes," film beginning three-day engagement at the Yost Broadway theater Sunday.

WEST COAST-WALKER

If you care for real entertainment, then by all means see "The Mystery Club," the picture which is drawing crowds to the West Coast-Walker theater this week.

It is a thrilling comedy drama, with a most unusual turn of plot having to do with an organization of millionaires known as "The Mystery Club," the members of which believe that they are able to commit all sorts of depredations without being discovered by the police, whose methods they decry.

To this end they agree that six members are to be selected, each of whom posts a large sum to be forfeited in the event that his scheme goes awry. In the midst of their plans, crime after crime is committed by some mysterious agency. The members of the club suspect each other and are compelled to spend thousands of dollars in order to divert the suspicion of the police and outside world from the organization.

The players include such individual stars as Matt Moore, Edith Roberts, Mildred Harris, Charles Lane and Warner Oland.

WEST COAST-WALKER

When the Armistice was signed, the whole world cheered—and gave a long, pent-up sigh of relief. At least almost the whole world did.

But there were a few, a very few men who were just the least bit disappointed and disgusted to think they never had an opportunity to get into the argument. It is about these few that Edward Sedgwick spun his yarn, "Tin Hats," the picture coming to the West Coast-Walker theater tomorrow.

The story concerns three dough-boys, one a rich man's son, played by Conrad Nagel, another a New York yegg, drafted into the service, played by George Cooper, and the third the American son of a St. Louis Dutch brewer, played by Bert Roach. These three arrive in the front line trenches just in time to hear the referee announce that "That's all there is, there isn't any more."

However, the plot thickens when they are sent into Germany with the Army of Occupation, and their subsequent adventures make the war look like the Saturday Evening Strawberry festival, back in Pawtucket.

Claire Windsor as Elsa Von Bergen, a titled German girl, is the heroine of the story, and with Nagel supplies the love interest. Tom O'Brien, remembered for his work as "Bull" in "The Big Parade," plays the part of a tough top sergeant.

YOST BROADWAY THEATER

A story with a hunchy plot and a picturesque background, touched with pathos and comedy, supplies Colleen Moore with her latest vehicle, "Twinkletoes," which is to head the entertainment bill at the Yost Broadway theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Kenneth Harlan, Gladys Brookwell, Warner Oland, Tully Marshall, Julianne Johnston, Lucian Littlefield and John Philip Kolb support the charming little star in "Twinkletoes," in which Colleen, because the story calls for a blonde heroine, appears in golden curls! She is a dancer in a Limehouse theater, the manager of which is a thorough villain. She's in love with a Limehouse pugilist and incurs the jealousy of a dangerous woman, and her father is at odds with the law.

But wholesome comedy and a happy ending make "Twinkletoes" a screen play that should appeal to picture-goers of all ages; its real entertainment from the first glimpse of the Limehouse street to the last sight of Colleen in her golden curls.

YOST THEATER

The real world has just discovered that Pola Negri, the screen's finest dramatic actress, can do comedy!

Malcolm St. Clair, director, pointed out this new phase of the star's versatility in her production, "A Woman of the World," which closes at the Yost theater tonight.

While essentially a strong drama the story has a vein of sustained humor, largely contributed by Chester Conklin. Miss Negri has a number of moments of light, polished comedy. Her handling of these situations is surprising.

Many actresses have risen from comedy to drama, but it remained for Miss Negri to win a world reputation as a dramatic star and then prove that she was equally effective as a comedienne.

Featured in the supporting cast in addition to Conklin are Charles Emmett Mack, Holmes Herbert and Blanche McHaffey.

MURPHY'S COMEDIANS

Patrons of Murphy's Comedians have in store for them next week, quite a treat, in that Horace Murphy, himself, is to appear in the cast of the new comedy drama, "Know Your Onions." This will be the first time in eight weeks that the Orana favorite has played in Orange county.

"Know Your Onions," is the popular comedy that played at the Orange Grove theater in Los Angeles a few weeks ago. It is written in three acts, the first act being in two scenes and requiring a complete change of scenery. The plot of the play is woven around an oil promotion scheme and a big robbery, resulting in quite a lively bit of action.

YOST BROADWAY THEATER

"Paradise," a picture screened from an adaptation of Cosmo Hamilton's novel of the same name, closes at the Yost Broadway theater tonight.

Milton Sills is seen in the stellar role with Betty Bronson as his leading lady, and a brilliant supporting cast.

London and the South seas are the locales.

Sills appears to great advantage, and Betty Bronson adds much to the picture as a former stage dancer.

Kate Price and Charley Murray keep you in a gale of laughter every time they flash on the screen. Noah Beery is rough and tough in the role of a scheming, low-down white who tries to kill Sills and steal Betty Bronson. Lloyd Whitlock, as the "heavy," is happily cast and gives a polished performance.

Into Whose Hands Does Your Money Go After It Is Spent?

Hands in distant cities grab for it—but you can keep it in circulation at home by buying local products—spend your income so it will benefit your own family, your friends, neighbors and your fellow workers.

The money you spend for products of all kinds either takes root in this community or it flies to distant centers. If it stays in Santa Ana and Orange County you will have another chance to get it. The dollar spent at home visits you again and AGAIN in the form of increased payrolls—larger property values—steadier employment—better investments or bigger opportunities in business and professional life.

The dollar spent for foreign made goods, the same as made here, goes to work in cities that are far removed from ours. You and yours see no more of it. The local products offer just as much value, quality and appearance as the goods from anywhere else. Therefore, you have everything to gain and nothing to lose by trying and buying the goods that are made, grown or put up in Santa Ana and Orange County. BEGIN AT ONCE.

CONGESTION AT INTERSECTIONS MOST PUZZLING TRAFFIC KNOT

Must Find Solution Before Uniform Code of Laws Is Adopted in United States

STREET CARS CAUSE OF MUCH DIFFICULTY

Three-Signal System, Instead of Two, Suggested by Professor Hobbs

By ISRAEL KLEIN

Science Editor, NEA Service

Before a uniform traffic code can be adopted in the United States, one of the most puzzling problems of traffic must be solved. That is the congestion at busy intersections.

Despite all sorts of efforts to relieve this situation, it is still far from a satisfactory solution. Especially is this true where street cars make left turns, usually in the heart of the busiest districts.

Left turns, and even right turns, for automobiles have been forbidden at many crossings. One-way streets have been laid out parallel to the main highways, with a view of relieving the traffic on the more important streets. Street car lines have been rerouted to avoid turning at such corners.

Yet those corners still remain the busiest and most congested.

The reason for this, in the view of an eminent traffic authority, is our present system of two signals—the stop and go—for directing traffic. Prof. Ewart William Hobbs directed attention to this fault two years ago, and gave his solution to the situation in the National Safety News, the official organ of the National Safety Council.

Dr. Hobbs' solution is the institution of a triple signal system, instead of the double stop, straight and turn.

By this system, autos would not turn before they got their special signal and traffic would be cleared for them alone.

At important intersections, the right turn could be retained, but the left turn eliminated. At other points, left turns could be made into one-way streets, at the given signal, or from one-way into the two-way streets.

At crossings of two-way streets alone, in case of left turns, a method such as that prevailing in Los Angeles could be followed. There, automobiles do not cross and turn like children looking arms around a pivot. Instead each makes a short cut to the left, passing the other car to the right and causing less delay.

By this method street cars could make their left turns, and auto-

BEAUTIFUL AUTOMOBILE DRAWS ATTENTION OF BRASS SEXTET, PART OF S. A. BOYS' CHORUS

"If you don't toot your own horn, nobody else will toot it for you," was evidently in the minds of the members of the Julia Lathrop brass sextet, chosen from members of the Santa Ana Boys' chorus, when they gathered around the new Cadillac sedan, of the Cadillac Garage company.

The boys will do their best tooting Thursday and Friday nights of next week, when the boys' chorus appears in its finest concert at the Santa Ana polytechnic high school auditorium. But so attractive was the Cadillac, when the boys inspected it, that they just had to break forth in "The Melody in 'C' Sharp," by Otto Haan, distributor for Cadillacs in Santa Ana.

Expressing his conviction that the Cadillac is the leader in its class, Haan said that he expected the junior division of the chamber of commerce chorus to become one of the leading organizations of its type in this city.

"The Cadillac has long stood at the head of the line in high class automobiles and that has been due to the fact that its manufacturers always have stuck to the policy of using the very best material and the highest skilled mechanics in production of the car," Haan said. "Good management, fine discernment, the demand for precision—all these have been factors in developing the reputation the Cadillac has today."

"I see in the development of the young people in the chorus the same features that made my car world renowned and for that reason I anticipate for the organization a success that in time will make it one of the most popular products of the Santa Ana schools."

Hubbies Bossed, Not Bosses, On Motor Travels

When Kipling "emote his blooming lyre" relative to the female of the species being the dominant institution of the family, motor touring had not become general. However, according to data gathered from 36,000,000 persons, he called the turn relative to women being bosses in motor touring.

When to eat, where to camp, where to go, how far, when to stop and other important points of touring are decided by the women of the party, although the male member may be doing the driving. The male of the species at the wheel may protest, suggest, sputter or sulk, but it makes no difference in the ultimate result, if statistics may be relied upon.

While this information is transmitted to the Automobile Club of Southern California from the east, the big motoring organization does not vouch for the truthfulness of it, but merely refers the alleged facts respectfully to married men for their rejection or acceptance.

STREET NAME CHANGED
Canal street, in Wilmington, has been changed to Avalon boulevard, reports the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California. It is planned to continue this street to meet with Avalon boulevard in Los Angeles.

'Pillion' Riding Blamed For Accidents

"Pillion" riding is listed as one of the most prevalent causes of motor vehicle accidents in England.

A "pillion" rider is one who sits behind the driver of a motorcycle. This position has proved hazardous and is responsible for many serious accidents.

English officials are considering a law making "pillion" riding illegal or else require that special "pillion" seats with the rider sitting astride should be used.

RESERVE YOUR BED, IF YOU WISH TO SLEEP

"Reserve your bed if you want to lie in it."

With one of the popular hotels and resorts of Southern California already hanging out S. R. O. signs, this new version of the old rule is included in advice being given motoring tourists, reports the official hotel department of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

The invasion of the Southland for the winter season is on in full blast and the incoming horde of travelers is already serving to crowd the hotel and resort field, according to advices to this department. It is stated that in many of the popular wintering places reservations must be made several weeks in advance even at this early stage of the season.

Whenever it is possible, to plan ahead of any trip, motorists in Southern California should always make sure in advance of accommodations for over-night stops, advises this auto club service department. One of the most popular motoring sections of the nation at all times of the year, Southern California is especially crowded with motor tourists during the warm "winter" months.

Hotel and resort reservations are being made continually for all motorists, whether members or not, by the Automobile Club of Southern California. The hotel department in charge of this reservation work at club headquarters, declares that these reservations may be made in all parts of the world. Many reservations are made in eastern sections as part of this courtesy service. The service is rendered for those who request it, regardless of whether or not the hotels or resorts are officially affiliated with the Automobile Club of Southern California. It is said. More than 5000 parties are being accommodated annually, according to the records. Motorists are invited to call Beacon 8600, auto club headquarters at Adams and Figueroa streets, Los Angeles, or any branch office in population centers of Southern California, to make reservations and obtain information regarding hotels or resorts in this section or throughout the country.

THEY PRODUCE SWEET MUSIC, BUT THEY'LL ADMIT THAT THEY CAN'T BEAT HUM OF MOTOR IN THIS CADILLAC CAR

This brass sextet, a portion of the chorus of 150 boys of the schools of the city presenting a program in the high school auditorium next week, offers music as sweet to their ears as the "musical purr" of the motor of a Cadillac to the owners of Cadillac machines. Boys in the upper picture are from the Julia Lathrop junior high school. Left to right—Lee Hoffmaster, trumpet; Carl Kent, trumpet; Clyde Becker, trombone; Dale Bose, saxophone; Woodrow Wilson, trumpet; Philip Gerrard, trumpet. Charles Bevis, proprietor of the Bevis Tire shop, at Third and Spurgeon streets, announced today that he has taken the agency for Mason tires. "I have confidence in the Mason product because I know back of it is an organization that fully realizes and accepts its responsibility to the consumer," Bevis said, in commenting on his acceptance of the distributorship here.

TRAFFIC RELIEF TO COST ABOUT $200,000,000

Nearly $200,000,000 will have been spent before 1933 by New York and New Jersey for perhaps the most ambitious program of traffic relief in the country. The program includes:

- 1—The $40,000,000 twin tunnel system for vehicles under the Hudson, already completed and soon to be in operation.
- 2—Two express highways of the "super" variety, costing about $75,000,000.
- 3—A bridge from New Jersey to Staten Island, $15,000,000.
- 4—A high suspension bridge across the Hudson at Fort Lee, $75,000,000.

When the Hudson vehicular tunnels are opened the first part of 1927, present congestion at ferry points will be relieved and traffic speeded up considerably.

At the terminals of this tunnel, however, police will have to cope with a concentration of the difficulties that were scattered among the ferry points. To avoid this, therefore, New York City is planning an elevated super-highway running from the Manhattan terminal of the tunnel up the Hudson coast to meet Riverside drive, at Seventy-second street.

Construction of this road will cost $35,000,000, it is estimated, and could be completed in from two to three years. It would not only speed up traffic from the downtown area, but relieve narrow streets now hopelessly congested.

On the New Jersey side construction already has begun on the partly elevated boulevard extending 13 miles to Elizabeth, with a tunnel part way through the Palisades at the beginning of the route. This express highway will cost about $40,000,000.

Applications for Renewals Will Be Handled Locally

Local representatives of the National Automobile club will handle insurance renewal applications for motor owners of Santa Ana, according to announcement today by Mac O. Robbins, of the insurance firm of Robbins and Son.

Robbins pointed out that the white certificate of registration is sufficient as an application for 1927 licenses and that the "pink sheet," or certificate of ownership, must not accompany the white certificate. The registration fee for automobiles is $3.

Due to the consolidation of the Chandler and Cleveland factories, in the future all cars of those makes will be listed as Chandlers, Robbins said, on authority of the legal department of the national club.

"For those who have Chandlers and wish to have the name changed to Chandler, it is necessary that they take the car to a Chandler dealer and have the radiator shell, name plates and hub caps changed," agent said. "After this has been done, address a letter to the division of motor vehicles, advising that this has been done and request that the change be made. In this event it is necessary to submit both the certificate of registration (white slip) and the certificate of ownership (pink slip). No charge is made for making this change."

"The same applies to the change from the Ajax to the Nash."

Former Employee Sued for $1814.17

The Crystal Cleaning company, of Santa Ana, is plaintiff in a suit on file in superior court against J. J. Looney, former employee of the concern, demanding $1814.17. The plaintiff claims that Looney, during his employment, received $2500 belonging to the firm and had refused demands to deliver it. The complaint credited him with $685.43 for wages and asked judgment for the balance.

Attorney Charles D. Swanner is counsel for the plaintiff.

MUSIC ARRANGED FOR BIBLE CLASS

Hugh Runnells, Santa Ana baritone, and Oscar Area, well known trombone player, will provide special music for the Men's Community Bible class, tomorrow, at 9:30 a. m., in the West Coast-Walker theater, according to announcement made today by W. B. Martin, president. An effort is being made to have 250 members of the class present tomorrow and to make the last few meetings of December the largest of the year.

Extensive Investments by L. A. Capitalists in Harbor Are Foreseen

(Automobile Editor Register)

Prosperity—straight ahead! I agree with many persons in Orange county that, to some extent, Orange county's future is tied up in the development of the harbor at Newport Beach.

Because I believe this, I want to make an appeal to my automobile friends to cast votes favorable to the $650,000 bond issue to be voted Tuesday—and to use their influence among friends to induce them to vote for the bonds. The harbor improvement concerns the automobile owners as well as any other group of men or women in the county, for with completion of the project, as proposed under the issue, Newport Beach will offer added features for entertainment for them when they visit the resort.

Would Eliminate Dangers

The residents of this county have a certain obligation to correct conditions at the harbor entrance to eliminate the hazard existing there. The harbor district is recognized as one of the big summer playgrounds of the Southland, and men, women and children from all parts of Southern California flock there for week-ends and vacation periods.

A certain percentage of the visitors enjoy boating and fishing, and always there are some who will take risk in order to satisfy their craving for pleasure. They will go out of the bay into the ocean, regardless of the safety of the exit from the bay. Only the closing of the entrance will prevent them running the risk. As long as this is the situation, it is an obligation on the part of the county to make the entrance safe.

The horror of the accident at the entrance three years ago, when the lives of six business men and the lives of two of the sons of one of the six were lost, will live long in the memory of those who were citizens of the county at the time. With the entrapment in its present condition, that accident may be duplicated at any time.

The safety of those who use the bay as a pleasure place should be the first consideration. Following that should come consideration of the project from the angle of what it will mean to the county in establishing what can easily be made one of the greatest and safest pleasure harbors on the Pacific coast. The possibilities along this line are unlimited.

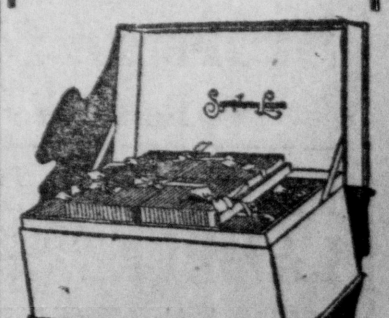

Benefit From Taxes

It does not require any particular stretch of imagination to view the day when the harbor will become the home port of the finest pleasure craft in the Southland. Registration of these vessels at Newport makes them subject to taxation by the county, and the direct return to the

Seventy Per Cent Advanced to Packard Ownership

IT IS disclosed that 1,400 out of the last 2,000 buyers of the improved Packard Six had never before owned so fine a car—or even a car in the Packard Six price class. Seventy per cent had broken their previously fixed habit of frequently buying lower-priced cars.

The average mileage on the speedometers of the miscellaneous cars turned in by these Packard Six buyers was only 19,388. And the average age of all these cars was but two and one-half years!

Now, the significant thing is that these 2,000 new Packard Six owners say they expect to keep their Packards an average of 55 months—nearly twice as long as the cars they recently turned in.

These buyers needed only simple arithmetic to prove that they could actually save money by owning Packard cars—if they merely would use the desirable mileage of first-class transportation built into these fine cars.

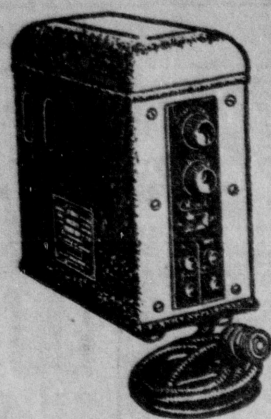

As an example of Packard prices, the five-passenger sedan is $2928 delivered at your door.

10 MORE ADDED TO MEMBERSHIP OF ROUND TABLE

Ten new members and two honorary members were admitted to membership in the Santa Ana table, Knights of the Round Table, when the club met yesterday, for its regular weekly session, at St. Ann's Inn.

An expression concerning the aims and ideas of the Knights of the Round Table was given by the Rev. Moffett Rhodes, pastor of the Spurgeon Memorial church, who was chairman of the program committee. He referred to the poem, "The Vision of Sir Launfal," and suggested that the action of the story was worthy of emulation in the lives of the Santa Ana knights.

Clyde Downing, international counselor for the club, gave an address in which he related some of the things membership in the organization has meant to him.

The new members took the following oath:

"As a loyal Knight of the Round Table, I pledge allegiance to my God, my country and my flag."

"I will honor and respect womanhood, protect childhood, reverence old age and deal justly with all."

"I will do my best to keep physically fit, mentally alert and morally straight."

"I will co-operate with my fellow men in uplifting the right and overthrowing the wrong."

"I will accept as my motto: 'He who seeks to serve another, best serves himself.'"

Harry Thompson, baritone, accompanied by Harry Warner at the piano, sang two numbers. The new members admitted were Paul Ragan, Harry Warner, Moffett Rhodes, W. L. Copeland, Albert Green, Frank V. Hoffman, J. D. Kelley, Ed Swann, J. A. Sewell and Ira Ott. Dr. Edmund P. Mills and Dr. William Ashmore were admitted as honorary members.

"CROSSING THE BAR" CLEAR CALL FOR VOTES

Editor Register: While thinking on the many lives which have been lost owing to the unsafe entrance to our Bay at Newport and hoping that the enclosed lines might be read by some who will vote on our bond issue, I am sending you the verses to use if you wish.

F. R. S., Fullerton.

"CROSSING THE BAR"
Sunset and one lone star,
And eventide at sea.
But oh! the moaning at the bar
That leads to the open sea.

And such a cry that calls from out the deep
A cry from o'er the foam
When those who ventured on the boundless deep
Failed to come home.

Twilight and evening bell
And oh! the hopeless dark
That followed all the joy of brief farewell
To their frail bark.

Sunset and ocean wide
And loving hearts that mourn
The smile and clasp of love at eventide
That never will return.

And though throughout bourne of time and space
The flood has borne them far
God grant that we can meet them face to face
When we shall cross the Bar.

Le Evoul!
Sunset and evening star,
A call comes clear to me
"PROTECT THE CROSSING OF THE BAR
THAT LEADS TO THE OPEN SEA."

ANOTHER PLEA FOR THE SAVING OF THE TREES

Santa Ana, Calif., Dec. 10, '26.
Editor Register: Can it be true that the avenue of magnificent eucalyptus trees in Tustin is threatened? Is it possible that the people of this county are going to allow that to be done without a united protest? Is Tustin willing to stand by and see it done? One would think the people would be glad to pay an officer to guard that corner if the trees are to be sacrificed, because certain automobilists do not possess wits enough to slow up at that point in order to prevent accidents? Does not the possession of one of the most beautiful avenues of eucalyptus in Southern California warrant an effort to save them for the enjoyment of all who travel beneath their graceful arches? Please, Mr. Editor, aid us in waking up the people of this locality to get busy before this thing happens. We must save those trees.

Jury Disagrees In Holland Case

One jury having disagreed on his case, John S. Holland must stand trial before another jury, on December 16, Superior Judge H. G. Ames has ordered. Holland was accused of stealing an automobile, on October 7, at Orana. The car belonged to Thomas Roach, of Yorba Linda. After hearing the evidence, the jury was divided in opinion, eight standing for conviction and four for acquittal, it was said.

Sun and hygiene, sun and treatment are what these words mean, and California blessed with sunshine and air that is clean offers new ways of using these blessings in the establishment of Sunshine Schools for children who need special care because of continued illness. Who makes possible these schools but your old friend in a new dress—the Christmas Seal. This year he carols Health and Happiness for those who will be helped from the proceeds of this year's Seal Sale.

BRIDGE BEING BUILT

A bridge is under construction across the Santa Clara river, just east of Saticoy, states a bulletin from the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California. This bridge will be open to travel about December 20 and until that time motorists will not be able to cross the river at that point.

YULETIDE RUM PRICE KITED: STUFF SCARCE

The price of Christmas booze in Santa Ana and Los Angeles is going to be higher this year than ever before, or at least that is the information that has seeped into hands of authorities here from some underworld source.

And the reason for the high price is the shortage of liquor that Southern California faces at this, the pre-holiday season.

That a case of Scotch whiskey, or stuff that is sold by bootleggers and called Scotch whiskey, will sell for $100, was the information received here today. The same case, last week, was selling in Los Angeles for $80, it was said. It was even rumored that $110 a case might be asked before Christmas day.

Members of Sheriff Jernigan's "owls," who have watched the county shoreline in the darkness during the last several months, and who have been responsible for several "catches" which involved liquor valued at thousands of dollars, say that very little liquor is being transported through the country to and Los Angeles at the present time. Tips on landing parties are coming in less regularly, and, in fact, landing parties are not as numerous as heretofore.

True, traffic in liquor may start again here within the next few days. It is possible to land enough liquor in Los Angeles in a few days to cut the $100 price to $60, like it has been for a year, but officers here, whose duty it is to know about shipments and to catch them, are of the opinion that the bootlegger is not going to do a land office business in Southern California this year.

The shakedown in Los Angeles, the capture of huge stills and big loads of liquor, have hurt the morale of the bootlegging forces, they believe, and instead of rushing more and more whiskey to Los Angeles in the next few days, officers here are of the opinion the bootleggers will be satisfied to make small shipments and get more money for them.

HUBBY LACKS JOB, CASH; BRIDE QUITS

When Marie McDonald married Walter Abbott, she thought she was marrying a man, a $125 per month job, an automobile and a $1000 bank account.

Two weeks later, she discovered that she had married only a man. From her divorce complaint, just filed, it appears that she was doubtful whether she had got even a man. Anyway, she immediately discarded him and is now seeking an annulment of the marriage. She also wants to resume her maiden name, Anna Marie McDonald. The complaint, filed in superior court through Attorney Scarborough, Forry and Reinhaus, states that the Abbotts were married last October 16. Abbott won his bride, she admits, by representing that he had $1000 in the bank, owned an automobile, and was holding down a job in a grocery store at $125 a month. But for these financial inducements, Mrs. Abbott would never have married him, she states.

On November 1, she states, she discovered that there was no bank account, no automobile and no job. Furthermore, that there had been no job for quite some time. Right away, there was no wife.

Thirty-eight and six-tenths miles on the gallon of gasoline is the economy record established by 5,205 Whippet drivers during "Economy Test Week" recently held by Willys-Overland dealers throughout the country to demonstrate the efficiency, economy, power, speed and stamina of this famous car.

Each car used in this test was a regular stock model Whippet. The test was "open to everybody". Before each test was made the fuel tank was sealed, and the driver then went as far as he could. In several instances more than 50 miles to the gallon were secured.

Never before has any car made a record like this. Never before has any car so convincingly demonstrated its economy to the motorists of America. "30 miles on a gallon"—4-wheel brakes and outstanding performance have made the Whippet America's most popular light car.

ORANGE AND FULLERTON GET REPRESENTATION ON RELIEF SOCIETY DIRECTORS' BOARD

W. T. Brown, of Fullerton, and D. F. Campbell, of Orange, were elected directors of the Crippled Children's Relief Association of Orange County at the monthly board meeting, held yesterday afternoon in the Elks club, Anaheim. The new directors will represent their respective communities on the board.

President Harry D. Riley presided over the meeting, which registered an unusually large attendance, including several visitors.

By unanimous vote of the directors, President Harry D. Riley and Vice President Earl S. Morrow were authorized to enter into a working arrangement with the county health department, whereby the county would employ Mrs. Gertrude Crowell, the association's field superintendent. It was brought out at the meeting that the superintendent is devoting a considerable portion of her time to what may be classed as proper county cases.

Work Given Recognition
Official recognition of the work carried on by the association, the only one of its kind in California, is a request contained in a letter received from the International Society for Crippled Children, with headquarters in Elyria, O., that the latter be furnished with a full report of the Orange County association's activities and accomplishments.

"The world is getting better every day and the best evidence of this fact is the growing interest, on the part of all citizens, in social welfare activities and the relief of suffering," declared President Riley, in voicing his appreciation of the splendid response given the association's appeal for funds.

"Never before was there such an interest in philanthropy and relief work as there is today; never before were there as many agencies of various kinds for helping the needy and the distressed and never before was there as many bequests, endowments and donations for worth while undertakings as have been recorded lately," he continued.

Approve Wood's Action
The directors voted to address a communication to Will C. Wood, state superintendent of public instruction, voicing their approval of his efforts to secure legislation that will provide adequate educational facilities for physically handicapped children.

Mrs. Gertrude Crowell, field superintendent, reported that the association has 29 active cases under treatment. Three new cases will be taken this month, it was added.

Miss Grace W. Bailey, secretary of the association, reported special contributions from the Anaheim Rotary club, the American Legion auxiliaries of Santa Ana, Anaheim and Brea, the Girls' Friendly society, of Anaheim, and various church organizations throughout the county. Included among the latter was the general collection taken up at the union Thanksgiving services, in Anaheim.

Among those who attended the meeting were Harry D. Riley, Anaheim; Earl S. Morrow, Santa Ana; Miss Grace W. Bailey, Anaheim; Miss Kate Rea, Anaheim; Mrs. Tom McFadden, Placentia; Mrs. George S. Briggs, Santa Ana; Mrs. E. D. White, Santa Ana; Mrs. Oscar Renner, Anaheim; Mrs. W. T. Wallopp, Anaheim; Mrs. Gertrude Crowell, Fullerton; W. T. Brown, Fullerton, and D. F. Campbell, Orange.

CHAMBERS BODY TO MEET DECEMBER 16

The November-December meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Orange County will be held Thursday, of next week, in the women's clubhouse, Westminster, starting at 6:30 p. m. It was announced today by George Raymond, secretary.

It has been the practice of the organization to hold but one meeting in the months of November and December because of the holidays. This accounts for the "off-date" of Thursday.

According to the secretary, the chamber of commerce in Westminster is arranging a program of entertainment. Matters of county-wide importance will be presented and discussed at the session, Raymond said.

Wife Says Hubbie Wasn't Divorced When He Wed Her

Charging that her husband already was wed to another woman when he married her, Mrs. Adah Birdley has filed suit in superior court against G. W. Birdley, to annul her marriage.

The Birdleys were married in Los Angeles in 1917 and, at that time, Birdley was not divorced from his first wife, it is contended. They separated Jan. 1, 1924.

Mrs. Birdley seeks leave to resume her maiden name, Adah Mayo. Attorney Roland Thompson, Santa Ana, is her counsel.

BIDS BEING RECEIVED
Bids now are being received for a large Grand Canyon National park construction project, which includes 14 miles of grading work in the park and considerable surfacing. An appropriation of $243,273.93 has been made for this work, according to advices reaching the engineering department of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Foreign governments now have control of price and distribution throughout the world of coffee, rubber, long-staple cotton, iodine, camphor, nitrates, mercury, potash and sisal.

ENTIRE COUNTY TO PROFIT BY HARBOR WORK

county coffers of thousands of dollars annually is a possibility.

With men of wealth and influence becoming interested in the harbor, we can anticipate also investment of their wealth in Orange county properties. We can expect their influence to be used in behalf of the county. These possibilities may be multiplied many times—and Orange county will benefit in every instance.

An advance in values of coast lands and the improvement of the district with beautiful homes will be reflected in the interior sections of the county, for no one section of the community can advance without also helping other communities.

Can the owner of property worth $15,000 consistently say that he would not pay the paltry sum of $1.41 a year for 20 years to effect a safe entrance at the harbor and to create a factor that will have important influence on the future of the "biggest little" county in the United States?

I cannot get the viewpoint of the man who would vote no on the proposition merely because it would increase slightly his annual taxbill. I believe I pay as much taxes as the average taxpayer. I say this merely to offset the possible assertion by some that I favor the increase tax because I am not a taxpayer.

My annual contribution will be something, and I will be happy to make it in the interest of humanity and in the belief that by so doing that I will be advancing a community I dearly love.

Congestion At Intersections Is Most Puzzling

biles pass across their left without the confusion now existing.

In his original suggestion, Dr. Hobbs had automobiles that would turn to the right keep to the extreme right, while those preparing for a left turn move over to the center of the street.

An improvement of this would be the provision for the opposite arrangement. Thus automobiles before turning right should turn out to the left or middle of the street, awaiting their special signal. Those expecting to turn left should move close to the right-hand curb for narrow one-way streets, or into the center lane for wide two-way streets.

There would be a possibility of confusion over this system only at busy corners where two important two-way streets intersect. Here, however, the left turn could be eliminated.

Left turns, at any rate, could well be avoided in many instances. Where they would work trouble for drivers, they could be instituted at one-way street intersections, or at the best intersections of two-way and one-way streets.

Here, turning out for left or right turns would make it easy for large cars and busses to get through traffic without delay.

Grade Crossing Accidents Show Increase in U. S.

Grade crossing accidents are on the increase in the United States in spite of safety schemes and crossing elimination work being done in many sections, according to figures recently received by the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

The large increases in such accidents this year are shown in a summary of reports of all the large railroad lines of the country. There were 3063 accidents at crossings on all the railroad lines during the first seven months of 1926, compared with 2681 such collisions with motor cars during the same period of 1925. Fatalities in these accidents during that period totaled 1292 in 1926 and 1154 in 1925.

This compilation does not include the shortline or interurban railway lines of the country which are also involved in a large number of grade crossing accidents.

Girls In County Home Have Yule Gifts for Sale

Girls in the county juvenile home today made a bid for the attention of Christmas shoppers.

A collection of handwork from the school has been placed on sale, in charge of Mrs. Nora Allen, county probation officer, and the proceeds will be devoted to brightening the Christmas season for the youthful feminine wards of the county.

"The money will be theirs, to do with as they please," said Mrs. Allen. "If they want to give a party, or buy gym suits, or anything else, they may do so."

Mrs. Allen urged that women who are looking for handwork for Christmas gifts inspect the collection of work in her charge at the probation office in the Hall of Records.

"It is remarkable work for these girls, who range in age from 14 to 18," said Mrs. Allen. The collection includes towels, buffet sets, bureau scarfs, aprons, dresses, rugs and other articles.

"OLD MAUD," FAMOUS STUDEBAKER, TO BE "GUEST" OF RILEY AT S. A. HEADQUARTERS

"Old Maud," 1919 Studebaker, which holds several records, snapped as it stood recently in front of the garage of Harry D. Riley, county distributor for the Studebaker. Riley is the "fat and good natured" looking chap standing to the left and his companion is Robert ("Old Broadgauge") Floro, who piloted the "old boat" from Los Angeles to New York in nine days elapsed time. He had no relief driver.

ROAD MAPS ARE MOST POPULAR GRIEF SAVERS

With all sorts of "grief savers" constantly being devised for motorists, the good old road map leads in popularity, according to officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

"Where is that map?" is a remark frequently heard in the touring auto, and if the question is not answered affirmatively, the chances are that many miles of unnecessary traveling will be done, delays will be suffered, appetites will be sharpened, and patience will sink to the lowest ebb.

Just how many times the hundreds of thousands of motorists touring millions of miles consult the map is a question, but it is known that millions of maps are needed annually for use of resident and visiting motorists in this section, as the automobile club map department now is turning them out by the millions and the club is credited with being the largest producers of road maps in the United States. Since the first line sketches showing the location of highways were attempted in 1910 by the club, tremendous progress has been made. In the early days of the organization the rather limited membership depended on confetti trails to guide them when making club runs in their cars. The ancient custom of sending a scout ahead to pick out the best route to the designated point and scatter bits of paper along the highway was found to be inadequate, and maps were demanded.

In response to the general demand, the club installed a regular map department in 1912. Incidentally, Elmer J. Brown, the youthful draftsman put in charge at that time, is still on the job but now has a dozen or so assistants in the actual map making, with scouts from the touring bureau and signposting department of the club constantly on the job of charting new roads and revising maps for old roads. Today every important highway in the United States, western Canada and Lower California has been mapped by the auto club map department.

NEW CARBURETOR ON FORD MODELS

What is said to be one of the most beneficial inventions of recent years, as far as the operation of Ford cars is concerned, is the new carburetor now being offered as stock equipment on all new Fords sold by George Dunton, authorized Ford dealer here.

The principle of the invention is that of the atomization which takes place when a liquid is dropped on a hot plate. Everyone knows that when water is suddenly dropped on a hot stove, for instance, it almost instantly vanishes into steam. This principle has been applied to the new Ford carburetor to the extent that every drop of gasoline is vaporized and made into combustible material.

A fact that engineers all know, but which few operators of motor cars realize, is the great waste of fuel due to non-combustion. The very method of operating gasoline engines is responsible for this. To create an explosive mixture, the gasoline must be atomized, or vaporized, mixed with the proper proportion of air, compressed and ignited.

If vaporization is incomplete, the nonatomized portion of the fuel not only fails to ignite, but collects on the cylinder walls, leaks down past the piston rings and dilutes the crankcase oil. Scored cylinders, burned bearings and burned pistons result.

Lisbon, Portugal, has introduced trolley cars having one end higher than the other when on level ground, to be used on mountain routes.

'Broadgauge' Floro Drives 'Old Boat' Across U. S. In Seven Days

Robert G. ("Broadgauge") Floro, and "Old Maud," a 1919 Studebaker, with which he has been playing hob with transcontinental records, have been keeping an engagement this week at the Harry D. Riley garages in Santa Ana and Anaheim. The car will be on exhibition here tonight.

Floro, nationally known cross-country driver, in September drove his "old boat" from Oil City, Pa., to San Francisco, in seven days, which Riley says is a world's record for a machine with one-man driver. Riley also pointed out that the car is nearly 8 years old and that it had registered 175,000 miles when the cross-country run was started.

Floro earned his unique title of "Old Broadgauge" some 18 years ago by his activity in promoting full width highways in the days when it was difficult to convince county officials of the coming prevalence and importance of the automobile as a means of transportation.

Recounting some of the records made by Floro, Riley said that in April, 1926, he drove from South Bend, Ind., to Jacksonville, Fla., 1205 miles in 48 hours and 20 minutes, and the following month drove from South Bend to Portland, Ore., 2677 miles, in 133 hours and 3 minutes, elapsed time. The distributor said Floro's most notable achievement was in 1924 when, with his wife and daughter and 1000 pounds of baggage, he drove his Studebaker from Los Angeles to New York in nine days, establishing a world record for one man driving a car with the number of passengers and amount of baggage. On that trip he averaged more than 400 miles each day.

COUNTY PRESS IS ENTERTAINED AT FULLERTON

The Orange County Press club, meeting last night in the McFarland cafe, Fullerton, voted indorsement of the harbor bond issue in a resolution declaring "We invite the people of Orange county to unite in carrying the election to success as being a project in every way advantageous to the county, serving, as it will, to cement the county in the bonds of friendship and good feeling."

Most of the newspapers of the county were represented at the meeting and the resolution was carried unanimously. The resolution was presented by Edgar Johnson, of the Fullerton News-Tribune, who moved its adoption, and the second was by Colonel Honey, of the Placentia Courier.

The scribes and their ladies were given a surprise evening, for it was after the splendid fried chicken dinner, served by the cafe, that revelation was made that the club members were guests of the Fullerton Chamber of Commerce. Ray Leach, declared by Johnson to be one of the best chamber secretaries in the Southland, was present and assisted in receiving the visiting writers. Mayor Harry Crooke also extended the glad hand and bade the group welcome in a brief address, to which Dr. Conrad Richter, mayor of Newport Beach, responded. Women of the party were complimented by the presentation of corsage bouquets. An orchestra entertained during the serving of dinner.

Following the dinner, members of the party were guests of the Mission Court theater, where the second program was witnessed.

After the show, the scribes were guests of Harry Wilbur, manager of the theater, on an inspection trip through the magnificent theater building. Personal inspection was made of the lighting arrangements, the dressing rooms and equipment for heating and cooling the building, the inspection revealing equipment equal to the best in any of the larger theaters in the Southland.

More Value than the Price Suggests

In the year just drawing to a close the price of Dodge Brothers Motor Cars was materially lowered.

Yet during this period more important improvements were incorporated than in any year in Dodge Brothers history. Advances were made in engineering and body designs. The cars possess a greater degree of smoothness, silence and ease. They are more comfortable, more beautiful.

Current prices—made possible, of course, by constantly mounting sales—are therefore not an obvious measure of value. Prices, in fact, have never told the full story of Dodge Brothers dependability and basic worth.

But now, more than ever before, there is far more value than the price suggests

BEATING LIGHTS LATEST SPORT AMONG DRIVERS

America has a new outdoor sport, that of beating the traffic lights.

It consists of speeding up at the last minute so as to pass a light-protected crossing before the green turns to red. There are many angles to this sport that entice the motorist and keep the traffic cops guessing.

One is that of "shooting the yellow"—moving forward as soon as the yellow or caution light shows. It's a dangerous practice, warn the police, because yellow is merely a caution light for all traffic to be at a standstill, but permitting those cars unable to stop readily to cross unmolested.

Another feature of the game, and a safer one, is that of avoiding corners with traffic lights altogether. Motorists simply turn off the main artery for a few blocks. It saves stopping and starting.

In some cities this practice has diverted so much traffic that new signal installations are necessary. This sport of avoiding the traffic lights, however, will die out, authorities believe, when motorists recognize that the lights are a help rather than a hindrance, that they tend to speed up traffic as a whole as well as keep it safe.

In fact, modern traffic control has gone so far as to introduce a system by which a motorist, going at a regular rate of speed, may continue along a main street for its entire length without being stopped. This is done by means of the cascade, ripple, or wave system of traffic lights.

The signals along an entire street are so arranged that green and red lights are interspersed. The motorist who times his speed properly doesn't have to stop as long as he is going in one direction.

The system has been found effective in New York and is being adopted in other large cities.

DEMANDS OF GOOD DRIVING ARE MANY

The pride that motorists take in their driving is a good thing—if it's warranted. The demands of "good driving" are so many and exacting that few can qualify.

The good driver must be a good judge of speed and of distance.

He must be considerate of others, even pedestrians.

He must watch his wheel and the road, and drive always with both hands.

He must give clear, adequate signals of his contemplated movements.

When traffic is heavy he mustn't spurt at every opening, but keep a reasonable even speed.

He mustn't cut short ahead of others, yet he must give others—not so good drivers—the better of the bargain if they cut ahead of him.

He must keep his temper and good humor. He'll find that most arguments among motorists are silly and trivial.

It's so much to expect of a human being that he who really merits the title of "good driver" is a rarity.

Lincoln Eulogy No Job for Dixie Child, Is Claim

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 11.—Declaring that no southern child should be called upon to eulogize Abraham Lincoln, Mrs. Oscar Barthold, of Weatherford, past president of the Texas division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, addressed that body in convention here.

Her remarks grew out of a discussion of Abraham Lincoln and the action of Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson in proclaiming his birthday a legal Texas holiday.

Mrs. Barthold said if southern children are not taught the right kind of southern history they will grow up to think of their grandfathers and great grandfathers as rebels and traitors.

THE TINYMITES
BY HAL COCHRAN

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The Tynmites all yelled "Hurrah," and started off, and on their way, they saw a lot of wondrous sights that Santa pointed out. Said Santa Claus, "I guess that we, to start things off, will stop to see the Doll House." And this plan, of course, was greeted with a shout.

A lot of funny little men went running by them now and then, and Santa shortly told them they were dwarfs that he employs. "I need a lot of help," said he, "because I'm as busy as can be, and all these dwarfs assist me in the making of my toys."

"Say, if there's something we can do," said Scouty, "we will help you, too. 'Twould be a lot of fun to know that we had made kids smile." "Well, that's just fine," said Santa Claus, "but let's forget it now because there's lots to see, and we can think about that after while."

A dwarf ran up and said, "I beg your pardon, but I've lost a leg." This startled all the Tyn-mites. They thought it sad, of course. But then they found that they were wrong. His legs were right where they belong. The leg that he was speaking of belonged to some toy horse.

Then Santa said, "You run along. I'll soon fix up whatever's wrong. I've got some extra horse legs stored away somewhere I guess." And then he told the Tynmites, "Of course we have our wrongs and rights, and often times my toyland gets to be an awful mess."

Then, "What is that?" wee Copy said, "I mean that big place just ahead." And Santa Ana answered, "Can't you read the sign above the door? That place is busy every year so I can bring a small girl's cheer. It's Santa's monstrous Doll House, and it's where we're heading for."

"Made in America"

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

The American marriage market that exchanges its millions for foreign titles, with a bride and a groom thrown in, is quite as active as it was 30 years ago.

The much-discussed annulment of the Marlborough-Vanderbilt alliance, and its manner of having been procured, may be out of the ordinary, but the American public is no stranger to the marriage of convenience.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, the cousin of the former Duchess of Marlborough, says in an article, "that such sales are not uncommon among the socially-elect, and that there is now one family in New York which for the past ten years has exerted its every effort to form an alliance with the British crown."

"If the parliament of Great Britain," says Mr. Vanderbilt, "were to set aside a certain ceremony required, precedent to such a marriage, it is possible that a New York girl, (Mr. Vanderbilt) would become a future queen of England."

The chance are fair that she won't, but it shows that in 30 years the custom of the marriage barter has not changed. Socially the evil is far-reaching. Nothing spreads like the class example. "The king can do no wrong" is as true today as it was a thousand years ago.

The material marriage is now an approved custom in all classes. And as mothers have learned greater worldly wisdom, they have learned to begin early to make allies of their daughters in the matrimonial campaign. They start at the cradle to preach the doctrine of the "credible marriage," which translated means "a good catch."

You cannot blame girls for growing up to think that the only desirable marriage is the materialistic one with worldly gain behind it. That is one change that 30 years has made.

But the results are the same. You cannot change these hearts of ours. A loveless marriage is bound to end in unhappiness, and that usually means divorce.

BEAUTY CHATS
EDNA KENT FORBES

SOME SKIN FOODS

This time I mean foods to eat to improve your skin, not things to put on it. These are specially for a muddy complexion, subject to occasional pimples, rather than for a really bad pimply complexion, which needs not only proper diet but medicines and local care as well.

One thing is to eat one or two oranges every day. You can take the juice of two oranges squeezed into a tumbler just before breakfast every morning, with great benefit to your skin, for the mild acid of the orange acts upon the liver, cleansing it and befitting health generally.

Another thing is carrots. Of course, the idea of eating raw carrots reminds you of rabbits in a garden, yet raw carrots are much better for you than cooked ones, though even cooked they are better than most vegetables. But to eat them raw, enjoy them, scrape them through one of those tin vegetable scrapers which every kitchen possesses, and pile the tiny fluffy bits onto a lettuce leaf, covering it with thick mayonnaise. You want at least a tablespoonful heaped up high, for each salad dish.

Or, if you don't like the dry taste of the carrots, mix it all up with mayonnaise and pile the juicy result in the curl of a lettuce leaf. Or, cook your carrots if you must, dicing them fine first, and use them either as a vegetable or cold in a salad. But—save the water you've boiled them in, and add milk and butter and thickening to make a soup out of it, or thick broth to make a consommé. For much of the value of this most valuable vegetable is boiled out of it.

Lettuce itself, raw or cooked like greens, is good for your skin, and spinach is marvelous—or kale, or any of the various cousins of spinach, which you can buy cheaply all winter long. But stick to carrots and oranges as a daily beauty diet and you'll see an improvement in your complexion as the weeks pass.

Bobbed M.—You are about 10 pounds underweight at 37 years of age with height of five feet, two inches. If you correct this you will look much younger. Get out into the air some part of every day, as this will improve your appetite, or get a tonic to build you up and increase your appetite.

Even though you are kept busy at home, the small children must have daily outings, and if you take yours with them, all of you will have better appetites and be less nervous. Just give this a trial and watch the results upon your weight and complexion.

Katharine H. J.—Wearing very tight hats must have taken the natural curl from your hair temporarily. Use soft kid curlers for a time until you train your hair into curling again.

The WOMAN'S DAY
By Allene Summer

Down, Rolled Hose!

The pretty daughter of the Sultan of Sulu, Princess Tarhata Kiram, a graduate of an American university, has given up her occidental ways of rolled hose and bobbed hair for the ways of a girl of the harem. Tarhata went home not long ago to become a member of Datu Tahli's harem, whoever he is. But when the sultan saw his daughter, the product of a western university, he held up his sultanate hands in sultanic horror. Now the princess has adopted the more modest ways and garb of true Mohammedan women. It would be interesting to know just what its compensating joys and charms are. Must be pretty good to effect the exchange.

Selected Souls
A committee of select souls from the General Federation of Women's clubs now meets in solemn session in a darkened room where pre-releases of the nation's films are shown them. After gazing all and sundry, they sit down together with notebook and pencils and issue their recommendations as to which of the shows are fit sights for teething children, adenoided children, and elders without the children.

One Big "Carp"
I sometimes fear that I grow into a carping critic. But I just can't resist one good big carp at this select committee. It savors to me of the utterly presumptuous, as any move is presumptuous which attempts to say "what is good for me, is also good for you. What I enjoy, you must enjoy. What harms me, will harm you."

You And I
We are all such creatures of our inheritance and experience. We see a movie. It's setting is the sea pounding on a rocky coastline. The very spot where we lived as a child before inland life was our lot. There is a bad, bold rum runner in the story who smuggles his loot in through the waves of the coastline. We hardly notice him, but watch the flickering film breathlessly, eyes upon the sea and the crags and the crested waves.

"Not Nice"
No member of the "selecting committee" ever lived by the sea. They all see only the plot—the rum runner. He might teach the tricks of rum running and deprave their children and themselves. They bar the picture. That is, they recommend that their members do not see it nor permit their children to see it, and thus even a child whose mind has stored up from history books a vision of the sea, might be deprived of his own picture because of something he will not see at all.

"Meddling Busy-Bodies"

BREAKFAST—Apples baked in prune juice, cereal, thin cream, waffles, syrup, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Creamed celery with poached eggs on toast, rice, muffins, canned white cherries, nut cookies, milk, tea.

DINNER—Baked halibut steaks, cottage fried potatoes, scalloped tomatoes, stuffed pepper ring salad, pineapple sponge, rye bread, milk, coffee.

Two fish steaks cut about 3-4 inch thick are baked sandwich fashion with a bread stuffing for the filling. An egg or oyster sauce can be served with them if wanted, but if scalloped tomatoes are used a sauce is not necessary.

Stuffed Pepper Ring Salad
Two green peppers, 1-cup finely diced celery, 1 package cream cheese, 2 tablespoons orange marmalade, 4 tablespoons chopped nut meats.

Parboil peppers for five minutes. Drain and plunge into cold water. Rub off thin skin. Cut slice from stem end of peppers and remove seeds and white pith. Chill. Work cheese with a fork until creamy, adding celery, marmalade and nuts. Fill peppers with mixture and let stand in a cold place for half an hour or until the filling is firm. Cut in half inch slices and serve on a bed of lettuce with French dressing.

Each pepper is calculated to cut in four slices and two slices are used for each serving.

Japan recently held in Constantinople an exhibition of its products which afterwards were given to Turkish charities.

After all, natural selection protects us and our children about as well as any other interference. I regret this move on the part of the good club women. It's so silly and irrational, and one more reason why club women are laughed at as "meddlers and busy-bodies."

A Christmas Book
If your child loved the book of "Pinocchio," and you've read it over and over to him until it's worn out, buy him for Christmas "The Blue Man," by Giuseppe Fancullini. It's a darling.

On Plucked Eyebrows
The plucked eyebrow must vanquish. So say none less than the stars of Hollywood. The natural eyebrow is "in." To be sure, it's naturalness can be helped just a little. That is, the stars do not insist on the foliage left above the nose. But that surprised, incredulous, puzzled expression that made so many of our maidens resemble newly hatched Buddhas is "out," praise the stars.

But all shall flit like butterflies among

Insistent duty and harsh failure's sting,
From all the burdens which a man must bear

But hardships are the builders of the man.

FISH THAT TAKE CROSS-COUNTRY HIKES

By ARTHUR N. PACK
President, American Nature Ass'n.

Can a fish walk or climb trees? Yes. It has been established definitely that several types of fish can live out of water.

The climbing perch, which abounds in fresh water throughout nearly all the Malay countries as well as Ceylon, India and Burma, is in the habit of leaving the water whenever the fancy seizes it, traveling cross-country, and climbing up the trunk of any tree it may choose.

Some of its marches are of great length, leading over high hills or broad, dusty prairies, until it eventually reaches a river or lake to its liking.

It is supposed that in its traveling the fish employs certain stiff spines on the cover of its gills, while within its head it also possesses a series of chambers where water may be stored for use in breathing on land.

Even in our own country some eels and minnows can travel from one pond to another near at hand when the intervening territory is more or less level and overgrown with moist grasses.

In the upper Andes of South America are found the climbing catfish, and fish which crawl out of the water to skip and play on the shore.

Seven miles of scenic roads touching points of interest now inaccessible to automobiles are to be built in Kilauea National park Hawaii.

SALES AT FRUIT STORE
EDUCATE GIRL IN MUSIC

Here's Joe Arata standing in front of his Detroit fruit store; (inset) his daughter Mary.

Girl, Home from Conservatory in Milan, on Road to Fame

DETROIT, Dec. 11.—It's just an ordinary fruit store, to the casual passer-by, but to Joe Arata it is the magic talisman that is bringing him realization of his life's dearest dream.

The location is good. It's right near the docks, where the excursion boats tie up, and holiday makers forever are dropping in to stock up with fruits and nuts before starting on a trip. All it takes to make it succeed is hard work and courtesy, and Joe Arata has both.

Dream of Wealth? No
He isn't trying to get rich, however. His dream is more lofty than mere riches. Joe Arata wants to make his daughter, Mary, the foremost concert singer in the country.

He first dreamed the dream years ago, when Mary was a tot of 7. Arata, like all Italians, loves music. To his wife, Colomba, he confided the hope that Mary could have the chance that he had missed. For Arata himself has a voice; a fine, ringing tenor that seldom gets an outlet anywhere except in the recesses of his fruit store.

So Joe Arata worked hard to get money for the big venture. He put in long hours at his fruit store, and in the evening he sat in his apartment, above the store, and taught little Mary the operatic arias that he knew by heart.

Work of Nickels, Dimes
Business prospered. At last the accumulation of nickels and dimes enabled Mary and her mother to go to Florence, Italy. Mary studied at Florence, at Genoa and finally at the great conservatory at Milan. Her teachers praised her progress.

Back home, Arata continued to work. He roasted peanuts, arranged his piles of apples and grapes and plums and his bunches of bananas in tasty displays, opened his store early and closed it late, laying away every penny he could spare to help his daughter get the musical training he had dreamed for her.

Only on nights when there were concerts or operas did Arata "step out." On such nights he cheerfully would stand in line to buy standing room.

A Grand Piano, Too
Oh, yes, there was one other use for his money. The apartment over the fruit store is not large, but Arata bought for it the best grand piano he could get in all Detroit. When Mary returned she must have the best instrument obtainable. At last Mary and her mother came home. Mary played the new piano for her father, and she and her mother sang. Arata was delighted. He at once began to lay plans for the campaign which would bring Mary fame.

Mary's First Concert
A new commodity went on sale at Joe's little fruit store as part of the campaign—a whole drawerful of 75-cent and $1 tickets. They were tickets to Mary Arata's first concert, in a downtown hall. They sold fast, too. Joe is a good salesman.

The concert was a genuine success, music critics said, so successful that there are certain to be more of them.

Mary sang and played the piano. Her mother sang. Further—Joe Arata sang, too!

"You see," says Mary simply, "father is not a finished singer. He is too old to begin to study, but he has a nice tenor voice, and we like to have him on our programs."

Which is the story of Joe Arata's dream well on its way to come true. (Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

SHE GOT DIME

ATLANTON, Kas., Dec. 11.—An Atchison woman and her daughter had just emerged from a store and stood under an awning. It looked like rain so the woman stretched out her hand to see if the rain had begun to fall. A near-sighted old gentleman, seeing the woman and her small child and the outstretched hand, placed a dime in the woman's palm. He thought she was blind.

"OLD MAUD," FAMOUS STUDEBAKER, TO BE "GUEST" OF RILEY AT S. A. HEADQUARTERS

"Old Maud," 1919 Studebaker, which holds several records, snapped as it stood recently in front of the garage of Harry D. Riley, county distributor for the Studebaker. Riley is the "fat and good natured" looking chap standing to the left and his companion is Robert ("Old Broadgauge") Floro, who piloted the "old boat" from Los Angeles to New York in nine days elapsed time. He had no relief driver.

ROAD MAPS ARE MOST POPULAR GRIEF SAVERS

With all sorts of "grief savers" constantly being devised for motorists, the good old road map leads in popularity, according to officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

"Where is that map?" is a remark frequently heard in the touring auto, and if the question is not answered affirmatively, the chances are that many miles of unnecessary traveling will be done, delays will be suffered, appetites will be sharpened, and patience will sink to the lowest ebb.

Just how many times the hundreds of thousands of motorists touring millions of miles consult the map is a question, but it is known that millions of maps are needed annually for use of resident and visiting motorists in this section, as the automobile club map department now is turning them out by the millions and the club is credited with being the largest producers of road maps in the United States. Since the first line sketches showing the location of highways were attempted in 1910 by the club, tremendous progress has been made. In the early days of the organization the rather limited membership depended on confetti trails to guide them when making club runs in their cars. The ancient custom of sending a scout ahead to pick out the best route to the designated point and scatter bits of paper along the highway was found to be inadequate, and maps were demanded.

In response to the general demand, the club installed a regular map department in 1912. Incidentally, Elmer J. Brown, the youthful draftsman put in charge at that time, is still on the job but now has a dozen or so assistants in the actual map making, with scouts from the touring bureau and signposting department of the club constantly on the job of charting new roads and revising maps for old roads. Today every important highway in the United States, western Canada and Lower California has been mapped by the auto club map department.

NEW CARBURETOR ON FORD MODELS

What is said to be one of the most beneficial inventions of recent years, as far as the operation of Ford cars is concerned, is the new carburetor now being offered as stock equipment on all new Fords sold by George Dunton, authorized Ford dealer here. The principle of the invention is that of the atomization which takes place when a liquid is dropped on a hot plate. Everyone knows that when water is suddenly dropped on a hot stove, for instance, it almost instantly vanishes into steam. This principle has been applied to the new Ford carburetor to the extent that every drop of gasoline is vaporized and made into combustible material. A fact that engineers all know, but which few operators of motor cars realize, is the great waste of fuel due to non-combustion. The very method of operating gasoline engines is responsible for this. To create an explosive mixture, the gasoline must be atomized, or vaporized, mixed with the proper proportion of air, compressed and ignited.

If vaporization is incomplete, the nonatomized portion of the fuel not only fails to ignite, but collects on the cylinder walls, leaks down past the piston rings and dilutes the crankcase oil. Scored cylinders, burned bearings and burned pistons result.

'Broadgauge' Floro Drives 'Old Boat' Across U. S. In Seven Days

Robert G. ("Broadgauge") Floro, and "Old Maud," a 1919 Studebaker, with which he has been playing hob with transcontinental records, have been keeping an engagement this week at the Harry D. Riley garage in Santa Ana and Anaheim. The car will be on exhibition here tonight.

Floro, nationally known cross-country driver, in September drove his "old boat" from Oil City, Pa., to San Francisco, in seven days, which Riley says is a world's record for a machine with one-man driver. Riley also pointed out that the car is nearly 8 years old and that it had registered 175,000 miles when the cross-country run was started.

Floro earned his unique title of "Old Broadgauge" some 13 years ago by his activity in promoting full width highways in the days when it was difficult to convince county officials of the coming prevalence and importance of the automobile as a means of transportation.

Recounting some of the records made by Floro, Riley said that in April, 1926, he drove from South Bend, Ind., to Jacksonville, Fla., 1,305 miles in 48 hours and 20 minutes, and the following month drove from South Bend to Portland, Ore., 2,677 miles, in 133 hours and 3 minutes, elapsed time. The distributor said Floro's most notable achievement was in 1924 when, with his wife and daughter and 1000 pounds of baggage, he drove his Studebaker from Los Angeles to New York in nine days, establishing a world record for one man driving a car with the number of passengers and amount of baggage. On that trip he averaged more than 400 miles each day.

COUNTY PRESS IS ENTERTAINED AT FULLERTON

The Orange County Press club, meeting last night in the McFarland cafe, Fullerton, voted indorsement of the harbor bond issue in a resolution declaring "We invite the people of Orange county to unite in carrying the election to success as being a project in every way advantageous to the county, serving, as it will, to cement the county in the bonds of friendship and good feeling."

Most of the newspapers of the county were represented at the meeting and the resolution was carried unanimously. The resolution was presented by Edgar Johnson, of the Fullerton News-Tribune, who moved its adoption, and the second was by Colonel Honey, of the Placentia Courier.

The scribes and their ladies were given a surprise evening, for it was after the splendid fried chicken dinner, served by the cafe, that revelation was made that the club members were guests of the Fullerton Chamber of Commerce. Ray Leach, declared by Johnson to be one of the best chamber secretaries in the Southland, was present and assisted in receiving the visiting writers. Mayor Harry Crooke also extended the glad hand and bade the group welcome in a brief address, to which Dr. Conrad Richter, mayor of Newport Beach, responded. Women of the party were complimented by the presentation of corsage bouquets. An orchestra entertained during the serving of dinner.

Following the dinner, members of the party were guests of the Mission Court theater, where the second program was witnessed.

After the show, the scribes were guests of Harry Wilbur, manager of the theater, on an inspection trip through the magnificent theater building. Personal inspection was made of the lighting arrangements, the dressing rooms and equipment for heating and cooling the building, the inspection revealing equipment equal to the best in any of the larger theaters in the Southland.

More Value than the Price Suggests

In the year just drawing to a close the price of Dodge Brothers Motor Cars was materially lowered.

Yet during this period more important improvements were incorporated than in any year in Dodge Brothers history. Advances were made in engineering and body designs. The cars possess a greater degree of smoothness, silence and ease. They are more comfortable, more beautiful.

Current prices—made possible, of course, by constantly mounting sales—are therefore not an obvious measure of value. Prices, in fact, have never told the full story of Dodge Brothers dependability and basic worth.

But now, more than ever before, there is far more value than the price suggests

Lincoln Eulogy No Job for Dixie Child, Is Claim

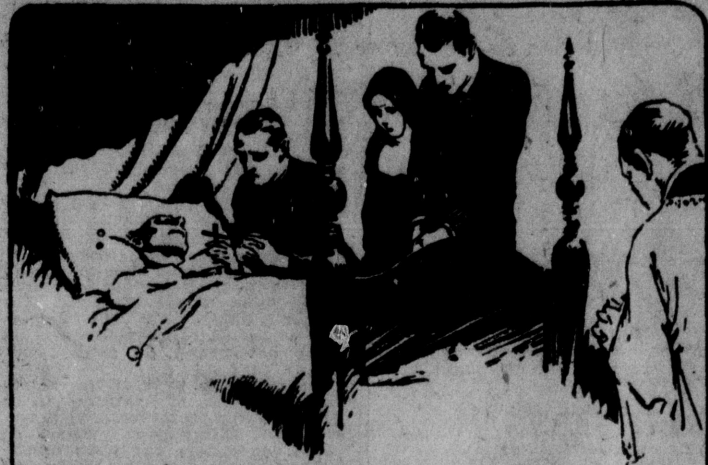

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 11.—Declaring that no southern child should be called upon to eulogize Abraham Lincoln, Mrs. Oscar Barthold, of Weatherford, past president of the Texas division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, addressed that body in convention here.

Her remarks grew out of a discussion of Abraham Lincoln and the action of Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson in proclaiming his birthday a legal Texas holiday.

Mrs. Barthold said if southern children are not taught the right kind of southern history they will grow up to think of their grandfathers and great grandfathers as rebels and traitors.

THE TINYMITES
BY HAL COCHRAN

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The Tinymites all yelled "Hurrah," and started off, and on their way, they saw a lot of wondrous sights that Santa pointed out. Said Santa Claus, "I guess that we, to start things off, will stop to see the Doll House." And this plan, of course, was greeted with a shout.

A lot of funny little men were running by them now and then, and Santa shortly told them they were dwarfs that he employs. "I need a lot of help," said he, "because I'm as busy as can be, and all these dwarfs assist me in the making of my toys."

"Say, if there's something we can do," said Scouty, "we will help you, too. I would be a lot of fun to know that we had made kids smile." "Well, that's just fine," said Santa Claus, "but let's forget it now because there's lots to see, and we can think about that after while."

A dwarf ran up and said, "I beg your pardon, but the job is leg." This startled all the Tiny-mites. They thought it sad, of course. But then they found that they were wrong. His legs were right where they belong. The leg that he was speaking of belonged to some toy horse.

Then Santa said, "You run along. I'll soon fix up whatever's wrong. I've got some extra horse legs stored away somewhere I guess." And then he told the Tinymites, "Of course we have our wrongs and rights, and often times my toyland gets to be an awful mess."

Then, "What is that?" wee Copy said, "I mean that big place just ahead." And Santa Ana answered, "Can't you read the sign above the door? That place is busy every year so I can bring a small girl's cheer. It's Santa's monstrous Doll House, and it's where we're heading for."

"Made in America"

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

The American marriage market that exchanges its millions for foreign titles, with a bride and a groom thrown in, is quite as active as it was 50 years ago.

The much-discussed annulment of the Marlborough-Vanderbilt alliance, and its manner of having been procured, may be out of the ordinary, but the American public is no stranger to the marriage of convenience.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, the cousin of the former Duchess of Marlborough, says in an article, "that such sales are not uncommon among the socially-elect, and that there is now one family in New York which for the past ten years has exerted its every effort to form an alliance with the British crown."

"If the parliament of Great Britain," says Mr. Vanderbilt, "were to set aside 'a certain ceremony' required, precedent to such a marriage, it is possible that a New York girl, not so distantly related to the writer (Mr. Vanderbilt) would become a future queen of England."

The chance is fair that she won't, but it shows that in 30 years, the custom of the marriage barter has not changed. Socially the evil is far-reaching. Nothing spreads like the class example. "The king can do no wrong" is as true today as it was a thousand years ago.

The material marriage is now an approved custom in all classes. And as mothers have learned greater worldly wisdom, they have learned to begin early to make allies of their daughters in the matrimonial campaign. They start at the cradle to preach the doctrine of the "credible marriage," which translated means "a good catch." You cannot blame girls for growing up to think that the only desirable marriage is the materialistic one with worldly gain behind it. That is one change that 30 years has made.

But the results are the same. You cannot change these hearts of ours. A loveless marriage is bound to end in unhappiness, and that usually means divorce.

BEAUTY CHATS
BY EDNA KENT FORBES

SOME SKIN FOODS

This time I mean foods to eat to improve your skin, not things to put on it. These are specially for a mucky complexion, subject to occasional pimples, rather than for a really bad pimply complexion, which needs not only proper diet but medicines and local care as well.

One thing is to eat one or two oranges every day. You can take the juice of two oranges squeezed into a tumbler just before breakfast every morning with great benefit to your skin, for the mild acid of the orange acts upon the liver, cleansing it and befitting health generally.

Another thing is carrots. Of course, the idea of eating raw carrots reminds you of rabbits in a garden, yet raw carrots are much better for you than cooked ones, though even cooked they are better than most vegetables. But to eat them raw and enjoy them, scrape them through one of those tin vegetable scrapers which every kitchen possesses, and pile the tiny fluffy bits onto a lettuce leaf, covering it with thick mayonnaise. You want at least a tablespoonful heaped up high, for each salad dish.

Or, if you don't like the dry taste of the carrots, mix it all up with mayonnaise and pile the juicy result in the curl of a lettuce leaf. Or, cook your carrots if you must, dice them fine first, and use them either as a vegetable or cold in a salad. But—save the water you've boiled them in, and add milk and butter and thickening to make a soup out of it, or take broth to make a consommé. For much of the value of this most valuable vegetable is boiled out of it.

Lettuce itself, raw or cooked like greens, is good for your skin, and spinach is marvelous—or kale, or any of the various cousins of spinach, which you can buy cheaply all winter long. But stick to carrots and oranges as a daily beauty diet and you'll see an improvement in your complexion as the weeks pass.

Bobbed M.—You are about 10 pounds underweight at 37 years of age with height of five feet, two inches. If you correct this you will look much younger. Get out into the air some part of every day, as this will improve your appetite, or get a tonic to build you up and increase your appetite.

Even though you are kept busy at home, the small children must have daily outings, and if you take yours with them, all of you will have better appetites and be less nervous. Just give this a trial and watch the results upon your weight and complexion.

Katharine H. J.—Wearing very snug hats must have taken the natural curl from your hair temporarily. Use soft kid curlers for a time until you train your hair into curling again.

The WOMAN'S DAY
By Allene Summer

Down, Rolled Hose!

The pretty daughter of the Sultan of Sulu, Princess Tarhata Kiram, a graduate of an American university, has given up her occidental ways of rolled hose and bobbed hair for the ways of a girl of the harem. Tarhata went home not long ago to become a member of Datu Tahit's harem, whoever he is. But when the sultan saw his daughter, the product of a western university, he held up his sultan's hands in sultanly horror. Now the princess has adopted the more modest ways and garb of true Mohammedan women. It would be interesting to know just what its compelling joys and charms are. Must be pretty good to effect the exchange.

Selected Souls

A committee of select souls from the General Federation of Women's clubs now meets in solemn session in a darkened room where pre-releases of the nation's films are shown them. After ogling all and sundry, they sit down together with notebook and pencils and issue their recommendations as to which of the shows are fit sights for teething children, adenoidal children, and elders without the children.

One Big "Carp"

I sometimes fear that I grow into a carping critic. But I just can't resist one good big carp at this select committee. It savors to me of the utterly presumptuous, as any move is presumptuous which attempts to say "what is good for me, is also good for you. What I enjoy, you must enjoy. What harms me, will harm you."

You And I

We are all such creatures of our inheritance and experience. We see a movie. It's setting is the sea pounding on a rocky coastline. The very spot where we lived as a child before inland life was our lot. There is a bad, bold runner in the story who smuggles his loot in to the many daves of the coastline. We hardly notice him, but watch the flickering film breathlessly, eyes upon the sea and the crags and the crested waves.

"Not Nice"

No member of the "selecting committee" ever lived by the sea. They all see only the plot—the runner. He might teach the tricks of rum running and deprave their children and themselves. They bar the picture. That is, they recommend that their members do not see it nor permit their children to see it, and thus even a child whose mind has stored up from history books a vision of the sea, might be deprived of his own picture because of something he will not see at all.

Menus for the Family
By SISTER MARY

BREAKFAST—Apples baked in prune juice, cereal, thin cream, waffles, syrup, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Creamed celery with poached eggs on toast, rye muffins, canned white cherries, nut cookies, milk, tea.

DINNER—Baked halibut steaks, cottage fried potatoes, scalloped tomatoes, stuffed pepper ring salad, pineapple sponge, rye bread, milk, coffee.

Two fish steaks cut about 3-4 inch thick are baked sandwich fashion with a bread stuffing for the filling. An egg or oyster sauce can be served with them if wanted, but if scalloped tomatoes are used a sauce is not necessary.

Stuffed Pepper Ring Salad
Two green peppers, 1-4 cup finely diced celery, 1 package cream cheese, 2 tablespoonsful orange marmalade, 4 tablespoons chopped nut meats.

Parboil peppers for five minutes. Drain and plunge into cold water. Rub off thin skin. Cut slice from stem end of peppers and remove seeds and white pith. Chill. Work cheese with a fork until creamy, adding celery, marmalade and nuts. Fill peppers with mixture and let stand in a cold place for half an hour or until the filling is firm. Cut in half inch slices and serve on a bed of lettuce with French dressing.

Each pepper is calculated to cut in four slices and two slices are used for each serving.

Japan recently held in Constantinople an exhibition of its products which afterwards were given to Turkish charities.

After all, natural selection protects us and our children about as well as any other interference. I regret this move on the part of the good club women. It's so silly and irrational, and one more reason why club women are laughed at as "meddlers and busy-bodies."

A Christmas Book

On Plucked Eyebrows
The plucked eyebrow must vamoose. So say none less than the stars of Hollywood. The natural eyebrow is "in." To be sure, it, naturalsness can be helped just a little. That is, the stars do not insist on the foliage left above the nose. But that surprised, incredulous, puzzled expression that made so many of our maidens resemble newly hatched Buddhas is "out," praise the stars.

PLEASURE AND PAIN

'Tis pleasure men desire and loudly praise,
Joy is by poets world-wide over sung.
Laughter is loved alike by old and young.
All hearts are lured by bright and sunny ways.
Men dream of happy, care-free, restful days,
When never shall the bells of grief be rung.
But all shall flit like butterflies among

The poppies which the breeze of summer sways
Yet from the things despised, from pain and care,
Insistent duty and harsh failure's sting,
From all the burdens which a man must bear
The greater glories of the spirit spring.
To days of ease are tuned the pipes of Pan,
But hardships are the builders of the man.

FISH THAT TAKE CROSS-COUNTRY HIKES

By ARTHUR N. PACK
President, American Nature Ass'n.

Can a fish walk or climb trees? Yes. It has been established definitely that several types of fish can live out of water.

The climbing perch, which abounds in fresh water throughout nearly all the Malay countries as well as Ceylon, India and Burma, is in the habit of leaving the water whenever the fancy seizes it, traveling cross-country, and climbing up the trunk of any tree it may choose.

Some of its marches are of great length, leading over high hills or broad, dusty prairies, until it eventually reaches a river or lake to its liking.

It is supposed that in its traveling the fish employs certain stiff spines on the cover of its gills, while within its head it also possesses a series of chambers where water may be stored for use in breathing on land.

Even in our own country some eels and minnows can travel from one pond to another near at hand when the intervening territory is more or less level and overgrown with moist grasses.

In the upper Andes of South America are found the climbing catfish, and fish which crawl out of the water to skip and play on the shore.

Seven miles of scenic roads through points of interest now inaccessible to automobiles are to be built in Kilauaea National park Hawaii.

In the Yangtsepo district of China more than 2000 cotton mill workers are idle because of continued strikes and lockouts.

SALES AT FRUIT STORE

Here's Joe Arata standing in front of his Detroit fruit store; (inset) his daughter Mary.

Girl, Home from Conservatory in Milan, on Road to Fame

DETROIT, Dec. 11.—It's just a ordinary fruit store, to the casual passer-by, but to Joe Arata it is the magic talisman that is bringing him realization of his life's dearest dream.

The location is good. It's right near the docks, where the excursion boats tie up, and holiday makers forever are dropping in to stock up with fruits and nuts before starting on a trip. All it takes to make it succeed is hard work and courtesy, and Joe Arata has both.

Dream of Wealth? No
He isn't trying to get rich, however. His dream is more lofty than mere riches. Joe Arata wants to make his daughter, Mary, the foremost concert singer in the country.

He first dreamed the dream years ago, when Mary was a tot of 7. Arata, like all Italians, loves music. To his wife, Colomba, he confided the hope that Mary could have the chance that he had missed. For Arata himself has a voice, a fine, ringing tenor that seldom gets an outlet anywhere except in the recesses of his fruit store.

So Joe Arata worked hard to get money for the big venture. He put in long hours at his fruit store, and in the evening he sat in his apartment, above the store, and taught little Mary the operatic arias that he knew by heart.

Work of Nickels, Dimes
Business prospered. At last the accumulation of nickels and dimes enabled Mary and her mother to go to Florence, in Italy. Mary studied at Florence, at Genoa and finally at the great conservatory at Milan. Her teachers praised her progress.

Back home, Arata continued to work. He roasted peanuts, arranged his piles of apples and grapes and plums and his bunches of bananas in tasty displays, opened his store early and closed it late, laying away every penny he could spare to help his daughter get the musical training he had dreamed for her.

Only on nights when there were concerts or operas did Arata "step out." On such nights he cheerfully would stand in line to buy standing room.

A Grand Piano, Too
Oh, yes, there was one other use for his money. The apartment over the fruit store is not large, but Arata bought for it the best grand piano he could get in all Detroit. When Mary returned she must have the best instrument obtainable. At last Mary and her mother came home. Mary played the new piano for her father, and she and her mother sang. Arata was delighted. He at once began to lay plans for the campaign which would bring Mary fame.

Mary's First Concert
A new commodity went on sale at Joe's little fruit store as part of the campaign—a whole drawerful of 75-cent and $1 tickets. They were tickets to Mary Arata's first concert, in a downtown hall. They sold fast, too. Joe is a good salesman.

The concert was a genuine success, music critics said, so successful that there are certain to be more of them.

Mary sang and played the piano. Her mother sang. Further—Joe Arata sang, too!
"You see," says Mary simply, "father is not a finished singer. He is too old to begin to study, but he has a nice tenor voice, and we like to have him on our programs."

Which is the story of Joe Arata's dream well on its way to come true.

SHE GOT DIME
ATCHISON, Kas., Dec. 11.—An Atchison woman and her daughter had just emerged from a store and stood under an awning. It looked like rain so the woman stretched out her hand to see if the rain had begun to fall. A near-sighted old gentleman, seeing the woman and her small child and the outstretched hand, placed a dime in the woman's palm. He thought she was blind.

RINGDOM NEARS END OF GREATEST SEASON

BILLY EVANS Says

INSIDE STUFF

Is it possible to try to play too much inside baseball? Positively, yes!

As a matter of fact, it is a very easy matter to overdo the strategy stuff in any line of sport.

Baseball, football, hockey and all other sports have certain fundamentals that must be mastered. A team well coached in these, having in addition great natural ability, will get somewhere regardless of the inside stuff.

The strategy of any sport is really of secondary consideration. No manager or coach can think for his players or execute the plays.

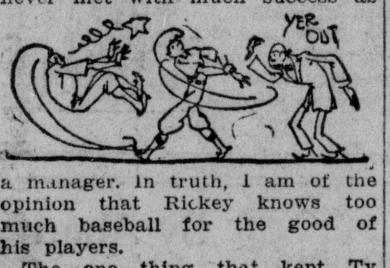

CAREER OF RICKEY

One of the brightest baseball men I ever talked with is Branch Rickey, who managed both St. Louis clubs.

Rickey has a keen mind. He knows baseball. Yet Rickey has never met with much success as a manager.

In truth, I am of the opinion that Rickey knows too much baseball for the good of his players.

The one thing that kept Ty Cobb from being a great manager was his inability to get on a level with his teammates. Cobb could think quickly and execute his thoughts just as rapidly.

SMART MANAGER

Rickey, as an American league manager, knew the weakness of every opposing batter. It was hard for him to understand why his catchers and pitchers didn't have the same knowledge on their finger tips.

Rickey knew the signs used by every other club in the league. He knew when the hit and run, steal or sacrifice was on, and even went so far as to have some word sign whereby he could impart that knowledge to his catcher.

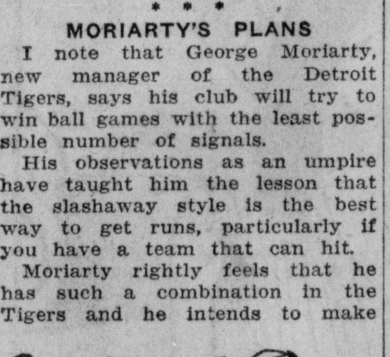

The failure of teams managed by Branch Rickey was not due to lack of baseball knowledge on the part of Rickey, but due to the fact that he tried to win with too much theory rather than sticking to the fundamentals.

MORIARTY'S PLANS

I note that George Moriarty, new manager of the Detroit Tigers, says his club will try to win ball games with the least possible number of signals.

His observations as an umpire have taught him the lesson that the slashaway style is the best way to get runs, particularly if you have a team that can hit.

Moriarty rightly feels that he has such a combination in the Tigers and he intends to make the most of the team's natural ability, rather than cram the players' heads with theory on how to win ball games without base hits, inside stuff.

TOO MANY SIGNS

Speaking of having too many signals on a ball club, always reminds me of the New York Yankees under "Kid" Elberfeld.

The "Kid" a mighty smart player, insisted on having a sign for everything. In those days it was not unusual for a pitcher to catch a runner napping at third.

Wid Conroy, playing third for New York, had to sign when he was to cover and the pitcher would count three slowly after getting the sign, then leave the ball to third.

Conroy's sign was passing the right hand over the forehead. It worked well in the spring but trouble happened the first warm day in June. With no intent to give the sign for a snap throw to third, Conroy wiped the beads of perspiration from his brow and the next moment was hit in the side of the head with a snap throw by Pitcher Jack Warhop.

He was rendered unconscious, the ball rolled into left field and the winn'r run crossed the plate. The next day Conroy insisted on a new sign that would not be confusing.

HARBOR LEAGUE TEAMS RESUME RACE SUNDAY

Tiernan Typewriter Co.	2 2 0 .500
Union Oil Co.	2 2 0 .500
Orange Merchants	1 4 0 .200
Westminster	0 3 1 .000

Promise of fair weather for tomorrow indicated today that Orange County Harbor league baseball teams would be able to resume their struggle for the A. G. Spalding cup, after more than two weeks of inactivity blamable to adverse climatic conditions.

Word from Huntington Beach, Irvine and Laguna Beach, where Sunday's contests will be played, was to the effect that all playing grounds are drying rapidly and will be in A-1 shape for the resumption of activities.

Joe Rodgers' league-leading Republic Supply company aggregation of Huntington Beach, victorious in its last 10 starts and a topheavy favorite to ensnare the Harbor league trophy, faces a dangerous antagonist in its own haunts this week. Westminster, a team that has all the class to be up there near the top but which for some inexplicable reason has been loitering down around the basement door, offers the opposition to the Rodgers troupe.

If Westminster shakes off its manacles and lays the baseball of which it is capable, there may be a blotch in the Republic Supply company's "L" column Monday night.

Manager George Lackaye of the Tiernan Typewriter company of Santa Ana announced today that the Tiernan joust with the Union Oil company of Huntington Beach would be played at Irvine park, the finest baseball layout in the county.

The Tiernans are still within striking distance of the pennant and hope to remain in the chase by thrashing the erratic Oilers on the Sabbath.

Charley Bustillos' strong Orange ensemble goes to Laguna Beach for the day's other contest.

All games are scheduled to begin at 2:15 p. m.

SANTA ANA CASABA SEASON ON TONIGHT

Ready for its first game of the year, the Santa Ana junior college basketball team will make its premier appearance tonight at the formal opening of Andrews gymnasium. The Don quintette will meet Southwestern university, champions last year of the Los Angeles Industrial league.

Coach Walter Scott will start in his first lineup, Frank Lancasterie and Faris Edgar at forwards, Keith Rogers at center, Russell Kokx and Donald Squires at guards.

The basketball game will be played after the gymnastic team of the University of Southern California has given a two-hour exhibition. The program will begin at 7 o'clock when the U.S.C. athletes give their exhibition. The basketball game will be played at 9 o'clock. Afterwards the gymnasium will be open to inspection by the public.

CRIMSON TIDE BOASTS GREAT SEASON RECORD

PASADENA, Dec. 11.—Coach Wallace Wade's University of Alabama grid eleven comes to the Pacific coast for the second consecutive year, for its game against the Stanford team here New Year's day, with a splendid record.

The Crimson Tide has swept virtually everything before it since Wade took over its direction in 1923. In four years—1923, 1924, 1925 and 1926, the Alabamians have played 38 games, losing three, tying one, and winning 34. They have scored the staggering total of 989 points, an average of more than 25 per game and have yielded but 120, an average of a little more than three per contest.

The southerners have not lost a football game since being defeated by Centre college, 17-0 in 1924. Last year, Wade piloted the Tide through an undefeated season, topping the year off with a 20-19 victory over the University of Washington. In the regular 1926 season, the Tidemans have rolled up 245 points to 29 for their opponents in winning nine straight games.

Their record for the season to date is as follows:
Alabama 54, Millsap 10.
Alabama 19, Vanderbilt 7.
Alabama 26, Miss. A. & M. 7.
Alabama 21, Georgia Tech. 0.
Alabama 2, Sewanee 0.
Alabama 24, Louisiana State 0.
Alabama 14, Kentucky 0.
Alabama 49, Florida 0.
Alabama 33, Georgia 6.

The fact that Alabama has yielded but 20 points in nine games speaks volumes for the defense Coach Wade has developed. In nine contests, the southerners have permitted their goal line to be crossed but three times and on each occasion won the game in question with plenty to spare.

That the Crimson Tide has met some high class teams is a foregone conclusion, but it is improbable that it has been called upon to solve such a powerful and deceptive attack as "Pop" Warner has developed in the Cardinal eleven.

Both the Cardinals and Tidemans are now working at top speed in preparation for the all-important New Year's day fracas and the rival players are reported to be in first-class condition.

CARDS REST AFTER LONG PRACTICE TODAY

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Dec. 11.—The champion Cardinals will be put through a heavy scrimmage this afternoon and then be given a football respite until December 20 before beginning the final training grid for the Alabama game at Pasadena New Year's day. Examinations will occupy players next week.

HERE'S YOUR REAL HORSEMEN

Here's the world's greatest scoring backfield. It's the "Pony Express" of Kingsport (Tenn.) high school. It has a record of 540 points scored against six opponents.

All four of the backs are fleet-footed and elusive. They can also pass and punt, making a real triple-threat quartet. Hug and Dodd stand out a bit above the others as they are crack drop-kickers, too.

Kingsport started the 1926 campaign with a victory over Norton high. The count (near as could be ascertained) was 193-0. The chap that scored the game was talking figures for weeks after, according to some of his closest friends.

Kingsport has averaged 90 points per game, or a point and a half a minute! Looks like you gotta hand it to 'em, fellows.

JUNIOR COLLEGIANS IN MARATHON TODAY

With favorable weather conditions, the first annual cross-country run, among the colleges of the Southern California junior college conference, was scheduled to be held today at Fullerton. A team of four Santa Ana runners were to be entered in the event by Coach Graham Harris.

The Santa Ana distance racers were Ray Grisot, Allen Goddard, Withrop Gordon and Carl Weise.

A cup is to be awarded to the college which makes the highest score and, in addition, individual medals will be awarded to those who place.

Last week the cross country was called off because of the stormy weather. However, the three-mile course over which the runners were to race, was in good condition today for the event.

BIGGEST FIGHT ATTENDANCE AT JACK-GENE GO

Rosenberg, La Barba Only Champs to Retain Titles Through Year of Upsets

BY HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Professional boxing accomplished enough during 1926 to record it as the greatest and most interesting year in the history of the game.

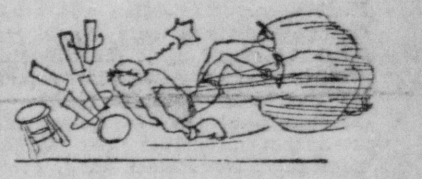

The fighters of today, it may be disputed, are not to be compared with the old timers but certainly the respect of the game and the financial possibilities that it presents reached heights this year that never were achieved in the past.

The respect that the new game commands was shown when Tex Rickard attracted 130,000 into a Philadelphia stadium to see Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney fight for the heavyweight championship.

The year was important as a matter of record not only because Dempsey lost the million dollar heavyweight title but because every other champion with the exception of the bantamweight and flyweight title holders lost or surrendered.

Two Champions Survive
Of the champions who started the year only Fidel La Barba, the little flyweight, and Charley Rosenberg, the bantamweight king, survived. And Rosenberg did nothing to distinguish himself.

Tunney defeated Dempsey; Jack Delaney defeated Paul Berlenbach; Tiger Flowers defeated Harry Greb and then lost the middleweight crown to Mickey Walker; Walker lost the welterweight championship to Pete Latzo and then made a record by winning the middleweight crown; Sammy Mandell won the lightweight title from Rocky Kansas in the first championship fight staged under the new Illinois law and Kid Kaplan retired as the featherweight champion because of weight difficulty.

The return of boxing to Illinois as a legalized sport was a significant event of the year and is an example of the strides the game is making.

The death of Harry Greb, who failed to survive an operation, provided a sincere black border for the record as he was one of the real great fighters of the era.

All Classes Scrambled
The approaching end of the year finds almost every class in a scrambled state. There is no featherweight champion of official recognition. Rickard is trying to settle the heavyweight situation by an elimination tournament.

Jack Delaney, the light-heavyweight champion, is admitted to be in no danger, but he has heavy-weight aspirations. Mickey Walker has to give Tiger Flowers a return bout for the middleweight title within 90 days and anything can happen in that bout.

Joe Dundee sacrificed his place as the ranking welterweight challenger when he was knocked out by Eddie Roberts and Kid Kaplan was knocked out in his first bout as a lightweight by Billy Wallace.

Charley Rosenberg is matched to meet Bushey Graham for the bantamweight championship and probably will lose. La Barba is going to fight Elky Clarke, the British champion, for the flyweight title and even if he wins, he says he is going to retire and enter college.

That "enter college stuff" is an other indication of the advance made in a most interesting year in this game.

200 PRESENT AT CHEVROLET CONTEST FEED

Twenty-five men from Santa Ana Thursday night participated in the "bean and turkey eating" festivities held in the Elite cafe, Los Angeles, as one of the incentive sales campaign conducted throughout the country by the Chevrolet Motor company, in November.

In the sales contest, Santa Ana was included in district three, zone 20, the zone embracing Southern California and Arizona.

The organization of B. P. MacMullen, Santa Ana Chevrolet dealer, numbering 23, was on the winning side and feasted on turkey, along with other organizations in the winning group. The losing group had to be content with beans and, in addition, had to pay for the entire "set up." The novel scheme of setting up a contest scheduled on the basis of the losing side eating beans and paying for turkey for winners hit the "funny bone" of every man participating and the feature was capitalized to the fullest in maintaining the interest of salesmen in the contest.

200 Men Present
Approximately 200 men were present and they had a royal good time, the pleasure of the evening being augmented by the courtesy of the Chevrolet company in providing a program of excellent entertainment.

The "bean eaters" also created good sport for the "gang," for they were a lively bunch and kept things on the move, even to tin cups and empty beer bottles. And by way of explanation for the presence of the two articles named, it should be mentioned that the bean eaters had to be content with paper for table cloth, tin cups for coffee, bottles for water glasses and vegetables for table decorations.

Executives of the zone were present and added their spirit of good cheer and direction to the big affair. The officials were C. P. Simpson, manager of the zone; Robert Zesh, car distributor for the zone; O. C. Schultz, W. C. Herling and Walter Hodge, traveling representatives of the factory, and D. B. Salisbury, advertising manager. Schultz officiated as toastmaster.

November Record Month

It has been revealed that during the campaign the Chevrolet had the biggest November business in its history, orders totaling 73,474, a total considerable in excess of the yearly output of some of the largest factories a few years ago. The Los Angeles zone—zone 20—placed 2330 orders, according to MacMullen. MacMullen and other Orange county agents helped to swell the grand total, the agencies also making a new high record for their respective locations.

Members of the MacMullen organization attending the dinner were B. J. MacMullen, E. J. Fitzgerald, George Moore, Leo T. Fitzgerald, J. W. McCain, J. P. McKee, W. J. Siddaway, Harry Rosier, Harry Bullock, G. C. Griffin, H. A. Bradley, John Green, John Graham, Charles Ramella, Bruce Decker, Leavitt Daley, Robert Long, James Ramella, J. H. Robinson, Hebe Siddaway, Jack Alsop and Don Morehouse. Guests of MacMullen were W. C. May, Ben Warner and Horace Fine.

SMELTZER

SMELTZER, Dec. 11.—The Gold-ton West warehouse at Smeltzer closed Thursday afternoon, when the storm cut the electric power off, making work impossible and it was then decided by H. T. Dunning, the manager, to lay off until Monday. The foreman, Robert Garcia, was ill and unable to continue at the warehouse due to complications as a result of the extraction of several teeth. The bean cleaning season will continue up into February, it is expected.

Mrs. Roehr and daughter, who have been visiting for several weeks at the home of Mrs. Roehr's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Groves, left on Monday to return to their home in De Kalb, Ill. The visitors had planned on leaving a week sooner but decided to extend their visit a little longer.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Nelson, who are in California for the winter and who have been guests of their niece, Mrs. Vernon Hell, have gone to Santa Ana, where they are with Mrs. Hell's mother, Mrs. Minnie Allen. Mr. and Mrs. Hell have spent several days at the Allen home this week, the family taking every possible opportunity to be together during the visit of these relatives from their former Kansas home.

Carmel Grana, of the U. S. California, arrived Thursday evening from his ship, which is stationed at present at San Pedro. His leave will extend until after Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Parr and family, who have been under quarantine for diphtheria, have been released. Only one member of the family, the small son, Melvin, had the disease, the others escaping by taking the inoculation as soon as it was discovered what disease the child had.

NEWS FROM ORANGE COUNTY TOWNS

WORK STARTS ON LA HABRA MASONIC HALL

LA HABRA, Dec. 11.—Contractor Wheatland started excavating this week for the two-story Masonic temple building to be erected on the south side of Central avenue, between Main and Hiatt streets, which will be the home for the La Habra Masonic lodge.

Time to be occupied in construction of the building, it is stated, will depend on the weather, but with average conditions, it is believed that the building will be ready for occupancy in four months.

The building is to be of brick, with a 50-foot frontage. On the lower floor will be three store rooms, and on the second floor will be a lodge room, banquet room, cloak room, etc. The lodge room will have a spacious balcony to accommodate the overflow at large gatherings. Furnishings and accessories will be of the most modern character in every way.

It is expected that the La Habra Masonic lodge, recently formed, will be ready to occupy the building as soon as completed. The lodge has not received its charter as yet, but this has been promised, and has been held up only until definite assurance of a suitable meeting place could be given. The lodge has chosen its officers and they are now prepared, it is stated, to put on the ritual work.

Several applications have been made for the store rooms on the first floor of the building, and it is believed that all will be rented by the time the building is finished.

STANDARD GETS FIRST BEACH WELL

SEAL BEACH, Dec. 11.—The Standard Oil company yesterday definitely placed on production its first producing well in the Seal Beach field, and became the second operator to get production in that area. The new well is the San Gabriel No. 2, which began flowing by head on Thursday, and which yesterday, after a 24-hour gauge, was reported to have produced 1580 barrels. Gravity of the oil is reported at 22.7 deg., and the oil shows no traces of water, mud or emulsion.

The San Gabriel No. 2 is making about the same initial production that was recorded by the discovery well, the Marland Oil company's Bixby No. 2, which later dropped to about 1200 barrels, and then suddenly picked up to about 1800 barrels, which rate it has maintained with fair consistency ever since.

BREA

BREA, Dec. 11.—The Rev. W. Judson Oldfield, pastor of the Brea Congregational church, delivered an address to the Men's Brotherhood class of the Methodist church in La Habra Thursday night, the gathering taking place in the social hall. A banquet was served at 6:30 o'clock by one of the sections of the Ladies' Aid society and music for the occasion was furnished by school students under the direction of Clarence Barrows, director of music in the La Habra schools.

An interesting meeting of the Brea P-T-A. was held on Thursday afternoon in the auditorium of the school. Pupils of the eighth grade, under the direction of Miss Marie Beck, assistant principal, gave a program consisting of choruses and essays. A short address was made by the Rev. W. J. Oldfield and plans for the children's Christmas treat were made. Following the resignation of Mrs. E. E. Salveson as third vice president of the association, Mrs. R. Green was appointed to take her place. Light refreshments were served by Mrs. Glen Burns, assisted by others of the hostess committee.

William Fiscus, temporary mail carrier, has been confined to his home for several days because of a sprained ankle, which necessitated using crutches. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Streed and small son, of South Laurel avenue, moved this week to their new home in Huntington Beach, where Mr. Streed was transferred some time ago by the Speed and Service Truck company.

In an effort to locate the water which came in during a recent test in the world's deepest well, the Chanslor-Canfield Midway Oil company is rigging up a string to circulate the heavy mud in the hole. So far not many indications of oil or gas have been found at the present depth of 8046 feet.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. George Beer will regret to hear of the very serious illness of Mrs. Beer's mother, Mrs. Sherman, at the home of another daughter, Mrs. Corbett, at Wilmar.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Salveson, of South Madrona, have purchased a home in Long Beach and are contemplating moving to that city. The change is made imperative because of the fact that Mr. Salveson is employed in that city by the Calpel Oil company and finds the drive between Brea and the beach city more

Says Laguna Beach Ideal For Peanuts

LAGUNA BEACH, Dec. 11.—Who said peanuts wouldn't grow in Laguna Beach? Mrs. Chester Smith, noted agriculturist, who has several acres of tillable land in Laguna canyon, and other farms scattered around the county, says they will. Moreover, Mrs. Smith says that they have been grown there.

"It is never too hot and never too cold here," said Mrs. Smith. "I had summer squash as big as your hat which I grew right here and yellow squash too big to tell about. My sweet potatoes were wonderful. The soil needs but one thing, water. When we can use all of that we want it will be easy sailing."

Getting the speaker back to the peanut subject the grower of good things to eat said: "The peanut crop is an expensive one to harvest because of the cleaning the peanuts require. So, if a person wants to make a lot of money from such a crop, big acreage and plenty of help are essential."

BAY HAVEN FOR FISHING CRAFT

BALBOA, Dec. 11.—Newport bay has been a popular place for small fishing boats during the past few days. High winds and big waves have made the ocean a dangerous place for the tiny boats.

Fishing launches from Laguna Beach, San Pedro, San Diego and other points are now anchored in the bay waiting until the storm subsides.

Winds and waves have done no damage to ships anchored in the Orange county harbor, according to reports from Harbor Master Tom Jay. A number of boats have been torn loose from their mooring in San Pedro and damaged, it is reported.

According to Jay, the fact that boats in Orange county harbor have weathered the stormy weather safely will be a big inducement to yacht owners to station their boats in the harbor when the entrance is made safe.

Several owners of small fishing boats have declared that if they had not taken refuge in Newport bay, they would, in all probability, now be trying to raise their boats from the bottom of the ocean.

TALBERT

TALBERT, Dec. 11.—Lightning struck the electric motor belonging to the Talbert drainage district Wednesday afternoon about 3 o'clock, cracking the transformer and calling a halt on operations. The motor is one used by the drainage district for pumping out the back water and extra drainage water at the mouth of the river, which is also the terminus of the system. Several men were at the plant at the time the lightning struck but fortunately no one was hurt.

George Bushard and John Pope, directors for the Talbert drainage district, made a tour of inspection along the canals Thursday to see if any damage had resulted from the storm or if any section was flooding from the extra amount of water which the canals were being forced to carry, but found all conditions satisfactory.

Three families arrived in Talbert this week from the state of Missouri to make their homes here. The party was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Penrod, parents of Fred Penrod, of the Talbert grocery; their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Landrum and their little daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. Alva Straub. $500,000 RECEIVED FOR 1926 GARDEN GROVE CITRUS CROP; 415 CARS SENT FROM PLANT

GARDEN GROVE, Dec. 11.—Citrus growers of this district are today receiving returns from the largest citrus crop to be shipped by the Garden Grove Citrus association, according to reports from E. M. Dozier, manager. Garden Grove growers will receive approximately $500,000 for the 1926 crop, according to Dozier.

Shipments of oranges from this district for the past season broke all records. There were 415 carloads of fruit shipped from the Garden Grove citrus house during the past few months. The cars averaged 400 boxes to the cars, making a total of 178,000 boxes of first class fruit shipped from the district.

According to Dozier, the largest previous shipment by the orange house was about 370 carloads.

Recent surveys of the Garden Grove orchards indicate that the 1927 crop will show an increase of at least 10 per cent over the present season. According to Dozier, a heavy crop is set on the trees at the present time. The crop, though heavy, is well distributed and the fruit should reach a maximum size.

WATER SHORTAGE SEEN BY WETTLIN

ORANGE, Dec. 11.—Predictions of a water shortage were made by D. G. Wettlin, deputy district attorney, who addressed the West Orange Farm center last night at the West Orange school. That there is a serious danger of a water shortage within a short time, was his assertion. Development of underground resources was urged.

That those who contemplate the development of subterranean water should know just what to do and what not to do in order to protect themselves, Wettlin outlined the laws governing the sinking of wells and use of the subsequent water.

S. W. Stanley, chairman of the ways and means committee of the Orange County Farm bureau, led the discussion on the matter of increasing the amount now contributed by ranchers toward the upkeep of the bureau, together with the state and national organizations. No action was taken.

LAGUNA BEACH CHAMBER LAWS ARE CHANGED

LAGUNA BEACH, Dec. 11.—Following an exhaustive research by a committee of five Laguna Beach citizens, a new set of by-laws was adopted last night by the chamber of commerce at an enthusiastic meeting. It was the largest gathering of members for a business meeting in some time. All misunderstanding, due to the faulty by-laws that has governed the organization, has been wiped out and the members are looking forward to the most prosperous year of the organization.

Four of the present directors will hold over for another year and 10 directors will be elected January 12. The new board of 14 will elect officers before the end of January.

The chamber of commerce is a corporation and governed by state law, which provides that the organization business must be enacted by a board of directors. In 1925, through a misunderstanding of the law, the organization adopted a by-law that was intended to provide for open forum meetings of the body. Under that rule any member of the chamber could vote at any meeting of the board of directors that he attended. The 1925 by-laws also provided for the election of 13 directors, instead of 14, as specified in the articles of incorporation, and for two at large by the directors, which gave one more members of the board than the articles provided. This led to confusion and a great deal of discussion. The matter finally was straightened out last night by the adoption of a new set of by-laws.

The by-law committee consisted of Edward M. DeAnna, chairman, James B. Neel, N. Elliot West, A. B. Marshall and G. B. Dunham. Foster Elliot, president of the chamber, said after the session that he felt very happy over the harmony meeting that resulted in the adoption of the new by-laws. The committee was given a rising vote of thanks.

The holdover directors are Frank B. Champion, vice president; J. L. Bricksles, vice president; H. H. Henshaw, secretary, and Frank W. Cuprien.

The much-discussed open forum question is taken care of in a new rule which provides that by a majority vote of the directors present, the directors and all members may go into a committee of the whole to discuss legislative matters. The question will be decided finally at the next regular meeting of the directors and directors only will have a vote.

LAGUNA BEACH

LAGUNA BEACH, Dec. 11.—Mrs. Borghild Stephens, secretary of the Santa Ana Air club, and private secretary to Joe Skidmore of the Skidmore Brothers' corporation, leaves by boat this evening for Seattle, where she will spend a month with her mother, Mrs. Thomas Nordness, who was in Laguna Beach two years ago at Christmas time.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard St. Clair, who have one of the most beautiful ocean front homes in Laguna Beach and one of the finest homes in Pasadena, will leave for the east this week to visit Mrs. St. Clair's parents in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Planalp left yesterday to spend the week end with Mrs. Planalp's mother in Los Angeles.

EVENING SALUTATION

To know what you prefer, instead of humbly saying Amen to what the world tells you you ought to prefer, is to have kept your soul alive—R. L. Stevenson.

PLEASURE, UTILITY, SAFETY

Some of those who are doubtful concerning the advisability of issuing bonds for money for betterment of the entrance to Newport bay have the impression that the sole purpose of making the entrance safe is to make it safe for yachts and other pleasure craft.

True, the jetties proposed will make the entrance safe for pleasure craft, with the result that scores of vessels of that kind now making their headquarters in San Pedro will immediately change headquarters to Newport bay. These vessels are of tangible taxable material, with some of them running into considerable value. Their presence in Newport bay will result in further construction of beach residences, which, too, will add to the values around the bay subject to county taxes.

But there is more to the fixing of the entrance than merely making it available to use by pleasure craft. It will be made safe for vessels of a commercial nature. Coastwise trade can be developed as there is call for it. A number of industries can be looked for that certainly cannot be looked for while the entrance to the harbor is a menace to every boat that ventures through it. It looks to us as though there will be immediate tangible results in the way of industries that will make an immediate showing in increasing the tax rolls of the county.

We find ourselves very much concerned with the humanitarian phase involved in this bond issue. We have pictures in our mind of small boys struggling in the water, crying out in terror as waves crash over them; we see them gasping, fighting for their lives, desperate, frantic, helpless; we see them die, their bodies perhaps to wash ashore, perhaps to remain forever in the sea. We have pictures of men going down to their deaths. We have pictures of boats being suddenly hurled bottom-side up, and men and boys stunned and disappearing, others struggling in the unexpected maelstrom.

Terrible things have happened at the entrance, and each year they will be repeated until the entrance is made safe for those who venture into it. Perhaps they venture unwisely; perhaps thoughtlessly; perhaps with bravado. Our memory is that in most instances where drownings have occurred, the entrance has looked safe, but because it is subject to sudden changes it proved unsafe, and a tragedy resulted.

One of the consolations of humble private life is not having to worry about how to kiss the Queen's hand.

DEBTS AND ARMAMENT

Armament continues to be a heavy burden on the nations. It is much heavier than the indebtedness to the United States which several nations consider so grievous.

Thus Great Britain's annual appropriation for her army and navy, an American statesman points out, is more than three times her annual payment to the United States. France's appropriations for armament are more than five times as large as the payments arranged in the American debt settlement now pending, and Czechoslovakia's are 17 times as large. Poland could pay her debt to the United States with her military expenditures for two and one-half years. Rumania could pay hers in 16 months.

Americans do not want the other nations to disregard their own safety or to save money on arms for the express purpose of paying it to us. But most Americans are convinced that European governments are still spending a good deal more money on armament than is necessary or wise, and would be glad to see further reductions all around, in the interest of both economy and peace.

The average American can make a whole lot more money buying real estate in his own town than buying foreign securities.

RAILROAD CROSSING STOPS

San Bernardino county is experiencing a difference of opinion in relation to railroad crossing stops. As to that, we find quite a lot of motorists who don't believe in boulevard stops and quite a number more who think the boulevard stop safety measure is overdone. Perhaps it is overdone, but even so we'd rather stop a few times a week unnecessarily than be hit once.

The Redlands Facts has expressed a similar opinion concerning railroad crossing stops. The Facts says:

"The county supervisors are considering doing away with the automobile stop law as generally applied to grade railroad crossings. There has been some objection on the ground that other counties do not have the same sort of traffic ordinance. To the mind of the writer that is important. Let them kill off their populations if they want to. We would like to preserve ours as long as possible."

Such is human nature that the average income taxpayer will feel twice as prosperous when he gets a tax rebate of 33 cents.

HOTELS OF THE AIR

Roaring overhead in the night, great air lines to connect England with her distant dominions, are about to leave the field of fancy for the realm of everyday fact.

Tennyson had the vision years ago when he wrote of the "heavens filled with commerce, argosies of magic sails, pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales." It was a poet's dream then. Now the people will not even look up to see these great ships pass.

The new British giants of the air, which will have a trial early in 1927, are complete with every hotel accommodation, berths, cabins, promenades, dance floor and dining room.

It still sounds like a hazardous trip to make, and one during which the comfort of the passenger might not be quite complete. But they said the same thing about railroads.

Farmers would still be prosperous if they could persuade city women to quit dieting.

Secret Paroles Disappointing

San Bernardino Sun

There is intimation from Governor Richardson that "Big Hutch" may return to California; and expose graft and bribery in Los Angeles county. It appears the swindler prince, whose parole caused uncomfortable periods for the state administration, has written the governor offering to come to California if promised immunity. This was before the supreme court of New York ordered "Big Hutch" to surrender for return to California. It will be remembered that during the uproar over his secret parole, Governor Richardson finally revoked the parole.

If "Big Hutch" does come back to California it is to be hoped that he will be able to furnish information more exciting than given by his erstwhile pal, Charles F. Dennison. During the height of the uproar over "Big Hutch's" parole, Governor Richardson sent Dennison, another convict, to Los Angeles to testify before the grand jury in support of the governor's charges against District Attorney Keyes. The grand jury was not sufficiently impressed with either the governor's allegations or those of Dennison to criticize Keyes or any one else by name.

Now Dennison has been paroled. He was given one of those secret paroles.

The governor has publicly announced approval of the parole for Dennison, declaring that the convict endangered his life by going to Los Angeles to testify before the grand jury.

Be that as it may, the procedure involved in the Dennison parole was an example of the unwillingness of state prison authorities for the public to be informed of affairs at the prison. Dennison's name was not on the published list of applications for parole.

The parole was granted at a brief session held after the action of the board at the advertised meeting had been given to the public. News of Dennison's parole did not appear until five days afterward.

The governor failed in his public duty in the Dennison case when he did not insist that the parole for him be handled in the regular way.

The state has lost confidence in the parole system, partly as the result of the manner in which officials have handled paroles. There have been glaring examples of justice gone wrong. The Dennison incident did not improve the state of the public mind.

Thrill of West in Films

Pasadena Star-News

There is no more colorful region in the United States for thrilling motion pictures than the Pacific West, and the Rocky Mountain region. Some truly great films have been produced, dealing with picturesque historical episodes in the development of the west. And in each and every one of these California has prominent place. There was "The Covered Wagon," a great picture; and "The Pony Express" and "The Iron Horse" and "The Thundering Herd."

And the latest of these great films dealing with history in the west is "The Winning of Barbara Worth." This is adapted from Harold Bell Wright's book of the same title—essentially the best book that Mr. Wright has written. It follows closely real history in the Imperial valley, and betrays events that stirred men's souls and tested their courage in conquering the desert, in taming a great river and in developing an inland empire, producing annually tens of millions of riches and peopled by thousands of families.

It is a splendid thing to put these historical episodes into motion pictures. It quickens the pride of Californians in their state. It sets California and the Pacific West before the world with the artistry and the thrill which command attention and excite admiration.

Writers such as Zane Grey, Emerson Hough, Harold Bell Wright and Eugene Manlove Rhodes have done and are doing masterly service for the west in putting the colorful history and the romantic life of the far west into enduring form on the printed page. And producers of motion pictures are rounding out the good work by making remarkably faithful and artistically excellent films of these stirring events.

DANGER OF POISONING IN PAINTER'S JOB
In painting, risk of poisoning occurs during the preparation of paints, during their application to new surfaces, and in repairing damaged surfaces.

The poison, usually lead, enters by the skin or by the mouth, either during the work or during meal times if the hands have not been scrupulously cleaned.

Paint splashed on the clothing becomes dry and liberates a poisonous dust. In the removal of old paint, it becomes liquefied and is more likely to become rubbed into the tissues than fresh paint.

Most of the poisons are compounds of lead, although arsenic, mercury and copper are sometimes involved. In addition, turpentine, benzene, methyl alcohol, white spirits, benzol and xylol may be used in the preparation of paint.

Numerous cases are on record of inflammation of the kidneys from inhaling too much turpentine or the other volatile spirits mentioned. When oil is mixed with the turpentine the evaporation is largely prevented.

In some countries the use of white lead, litharge, and of powder containing red lead is prohibited. In France, red lead in paint is not permitted, except in instances in which the paint is likely to be subjected to great and persistent dampness, and in which maintenance is difficult, as holds of ships, in the lower parts of boilers and propeller shafts.

It is not necessary to paint pipes with red lead paint, since there are several artificial and inoffensive red dyes which may be used to equal advantage.

Zinc white paint can be substituted for white lead paint in many instances. The most frequent instances of poisoning from lead seem to occur in the painting of automobiles and carriages, in which there are numerous coats beginning with a priming coat of white lead.

The constant rubbing down tends to cause the lead to work into the tissues. Workers with paint, and indeed, all workers with lead, should be subjected to periodical physical examination since the poisoning is insidious and tends to produce serious symptoms before it is detected.

The New Hope

Where Water Is Vital

Fresno Republican

This case, in itself, is dramatic enough.

It finds, arrayed on one side of the dispute the state of Wisconsin, which objects to threatened lowering of the water of the lake, and on the other side the state of Illinois, which must protect the Chicago drainage district in its undertaking.

But Wisconsin is supported morally and legally by Minnesota, which has a Lake Superior frontage; by Indiana, which has a Lake Michigan frontage; by Ohio, which has a Lake Erie line, and by Pennsylvania and by New York, which border on Ontario. Illinois is aided by Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee, Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi—all of them being states bordering on the Mississippi river, and so anxious that the flow of water into that stream in seasons of low water shall be raised, in order to further river traffic.

It is a struggle for water. The fight for water is not alone to be seen in the arid west. The level of the Great Lakes is lowering year by year. Whether by natural causes, or by a reduction in the seasonal rainfall, is questioned. But this great group of states needs water, is fighting for water, and each is determined that the states on the other side shall not have the water they want.

Ravenna, in northern Italy, was once the capital of the known world.

Now it is a sleepy little town, with buildings that no one occupies and businesses that are maintained largely because men have read about in books what happened in the town two thousand years ago.

Why this change? Principally because Ravenna was then on the Adriatic sea. Now the sea is six miles away, and traffic goes elsewhere instead of Ravenna.

What would happen to Milwaukee if Chicago lowered the level of Lake Michigan 10 feet? Or to Cleveland?

THE INNER VISION

Most sweet it is with unlifted eyes
To pace the ground, if path be there or none,
While a fair region round the traveler lies
Which he forbears again to look upon;

Pleased rather with some soft ideal scene,
The work of Fancy, or some happy tone
Of meditation, slipping in between
The beauty coming and the beauty gone.

—If Thought and Love desert us, from that day
Let us break off all commerce with the Muse:
With Thought and Love companions of our way—

Whate'er the senses take or may refuse—
The Mind's internal heaven shall shed her dew
Of inspiration on the humblest lay.

THE STEWARD'S MISTAKE

The steward stood at the head of the gangway of one of the large ocean-going steamships, and for the benefit of the arriving passengers kept shouting: "First-class passengers to the right! Second-class to the left!"

A young woman stepped carefully aboard with a baby in her arms.

As she hesitated beside the steward he bent toward her and asked: "First or second?"

ON THE SIDE LINES

Which May or May Not Be in Accord With the Views of The Register

By Horace McPhee

PROMPT ACTION NEEDED—

An object lesson of the great damage wrought in localities where forest conservation and protection against forest fires (which are practically one and the same thing) have been neglected, may be found right here in Orange county, where recent forest fires have so denuded the mountain slopes as to render them incapable of retaining and conserving the rain.

Unless fires shall be checked and the devastated area reforested, this danger is bound to increase. One form it will take is the actual destruction of arable land. Such land may be turned into wilderness. Floods may wash the fertile soil away, leaving nothing which can afford vegetation a chance for a fresh start. Such has been the history of more than one section from which all timber has been cut or burned.

Another matter worth considering is that ruin of the watershed means the waste of water needed for municipal and household purposes. Instead of rain soaking into the ground, it rushes to lower level, often with a violence that causes great damage, and finally is lost in the ocean.

This ever present danger is a real one, and it is referred to here to the end that all our people may give thought to the matter, and that they may give unstinted support to those who are taking steps looking to the adoption of properly conceived and scientifically executed plans for looking the stable door before, and not after, the horse has been stolen.

THAT MAN CUTTLE—

Some day, perhaps, Southern California, the whole state in fact, will feel impelled to honor the splendid work done, for to these many years, by a Riverside man who has made a careful study of what is undoubtedly the most important matter demanding the attention of the people of this state. That question is not the retention of the protective tariff on our products, which we now enjoy and greatly appreciate; neither is it the retention in office of any political party; it is the conservation of our forests, to the end that damage by floods may be as nearly as possible eliminated.

To Francis Cuttle of Riverside may be given the credit of being foremost in this work. In and out of season he has worked faithfully, with great ability, and most unselfishly to arouse public interest in the cause, and it is no exaggeration to state that the present condition of the public mind in favor of such conservation is due in large measure to his efforts.

EXTRA HAZARDOUS—

Chas. F. Dennison, one of the pals of "Big Hutch" and who was also a prisoner at San Quentin, has been granted a parole and it was done as quietly and unostentatiously as "falleth the gentle dew from heaven," without undue or indeed any publicity.

Governor Richardson commends the act of the prison board in granting the parole, and says that when Dennison "went to Los Angeles and told the truth" he risked his life by so doing.

Seems as if this was about the severest thing said of Los Angeles for some little time.

THERE WILL BE PLENTY—

Governor Richardson has made public a number of letters received by him commending his failure to invite Queen Marie of Rumania to visit this state. One of these letters expresses the hope that the governor will be chosen as the next United States senator from California.

Well, if all citizens of this state who failed to invite Queen Marie to pay us a visit are candidates for the senate in 1928 there bids fair to be "right smart" of candidates.

Winter Bedtime

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

In the colder climates, when the animals are unable to get their accustomed food and have not learned to store their winter's supply, as does the squirrel for instance, they withdraw to shelters beyond the reach of frost, and sleep, or hibernate, till spring. The bear chooses a den or hollow tree, angle worms burrow below the frost line, frogs burrow into the mud of a stream bed and the insect pupa lie in cocoons or earthen casnets. We do not know just the nature of this dormancy, but it seems to be little different from ordinary sleep, except in its soundness and prolonged season. Some animals, like the bat, the chipmunk and some bears, are light sleepers, coming out on warm days. Others, like the woodchuck, enter a sleep as near death as possible and cannot be awakened. A woodchuck can be rolled about and will not waken, for his senses are so fast asleep for this period that he fails to respond to stimuli.
